THE SOUTHERN PART OF HEAVEN: ONE SCENE

For many the injustices Negroes experience daily isn't news anymore. Even the injustices toward whites who battle for the rights of others is of questionable interest.

In our society both experiences are so common that most ignore it and many just don't give a damn.

Nonetheless this editorial describes such an ordinary, everyday situation that Americans have come to accept.

It concerns a white man who is known among the people of this community as a dedicated and responsible person. A man who has devoted himself to achieving justice for Negroes.

Pat Cusick is a member of the Executive Committee of the Chapel Hill Committee for Open Business. In that capacity he has participated in every COB activity. It was he, who as Chairman of the Student Peace Union on campus initiated the picketing of the College Cafe in early April, who helped organize the COB, who conducted the non-violent workshops, who led the sit-ins and who remained in the Hillsboro jail four days.

Behind every activity of the COB has been Pat Cusick's strength. If pressing circumstances called for additional effort he always offered his assistance. In this way Pat gave the hospitality of his house to a friend.

The friend was Quintin Baker. For over a month now Quintin, an NAACP commando, has been working with the COB. During this time he accepted the hospitality of other people in the Chapel Hill community. A few days ago he began staying with Pat. He slept and ate in Pat's house for two days.

On Tuesday, August 6, the town constable summoned Pat Cusick to appear before Chapel Hill's Justice of the Peace. There, on Thursday, Aug. 8, he was told to get out of his house by Monday, August 12.

Mr. Giles Horney, Building and Grounds Superintendent of the University, the owner of Pat's house, evicted him. This action was taken because "the rent was 5 days overdue" & because of "the mess" that was entering Pat's house. To Mr. Horney, it made no difference that Pat had been living there for 2½ years.

Because Quintin Baker is a Negro.
