Tigers are Little League Champs

By Lance Guy

The Lions Club Tigers climaxed a successful season by scoring a convincing 8-5 victory Saturday night over the Yankees in the deciding game of the Wake Forest Little League Tournament. The Tigers went through the tournament play undefeated; the Yankees lost twice, both times to the Tigers. The Yankees made a valiant effort to capture the series' finale, but a five run fourth-inning fell short as Tiger centerfielder Mike Wall corralled a long fly off the bat of Jerry Looper. The Tigers had built a 6-0 lead due to some adept baserunning aided by Yankee errors. Then in the Tiger fifth an error, Larry Warren's double, and a scorching line-drive triple to left field by Danny Crutchfield produced the final two runs for the Tigers. Danny Blake, in relief of Tiger starting and winning pitcher Steve Holman, set down the Yankees in the home fifth.

Most of the local baseball personalities and many of the fans agreed that the Tigers-Yankees tension filled encounter illustrated the brand of baseball played in the league this year. To be sure, some of the teams were ill-organized, but for the most part the spirit of competition was much keener than in any previous year. However, the most notable difference was the victorious Tiger's style of play. Asked to comment on his team's success, Tiger Coach Charlie Padgett said "They played the game their way and we played it the right way." Pressed for clarification on this point, Coach Padgett said "It all depends on your philosophy, if you've got one. In most non-professional leagues, such as the Little League the best offense is always a good defense. We concentrated less on base hits and more on just making contact with the ball. The greater the number of times a team is forced to field a ball the greater the possibility of miscue. Once we're on the base we like to create a little confusion. Conversely, most of our practice sessions were spent learning how to think defensively. For example, our most successful pitcher, Steve Holman, doesn't throw nearly as hard as some of the other pitchers, but he can talk to you for five minutes on what it means for the pitcher to be a fifth in-fielder. There are no pitchers in the league who are as capable as Holman in defensive reaction. But overall, I'd say that aside from learning that there is more to baseball than a bat and a ball, the boys are secure in the knowledge that a lot of guts can make a small amount of ability go a long way. Take a group of boys who want to eat, sleep, drink, and think baseball and victory will always be within reach."

Little League Runners-up

The Wake Forest Little League Yankees were runners-up for the championship this year. Bill Wooten, Ronnie Hammack, Bobby Parker, Tim Mabrey, and Johnny Dean were not present for the picture. —(Bob Allen Photo).

Rolesville Firemen Honor Crate Jones

The volunteer firemen of the Rolesville Rural Fire Department entertained the Rev. Crate Jones at a barbecue supper, Monday night at the firehouse. Rev. Jones who joined the volunteer department at its beginning in 1958 is leaving Rolesville this week for a new pastorate in Durham. The firemen presented Rev. Jones with an engraved Bible with the firemen's names listed on the flyleaf. Among those attending were all of the local members along with John Perkinson, who was President until this year.

Senator Sam Ervin Says:

Crime, Violence Increase

WASHINGTON — Second only to concern about Vietnam is that expressed about growing crime and violence. I consider crime our most important domestic problem. Here in Washington crime has reached appalling proportions. Almost any 24 hour period could be designated as "crime day". Attacks by bandits on homes, offices, banks, and their innocent citizens fill the newspapers. All sections of the city are targets. Yet, the situation is not confined to this city. FBI reports show that serious crime is mounting at an alarming rate in all areas of the country. While we have pursued other domestic goals, crime has become a national disgrace.

Some change may be in the offing. A few days ago, the Attorney-General launched the President's new national crime commission with the assurance that crime is to get special attention. On July 22, 23, and 30, I conducted Senate hearings on a special proposal to aid law enforcement officials throughout the country. The measure, which has since passed the House unanimously, calls for training programs for local law enforcement personnel and for projects to improve anti-crime techniques. Federal grants of $10 million annually for three years would assist state and local enforcement agencies in a national attack on the problem. Senate action is expected soon. This updating of police techniques and training is a step in the right direction.

But the country should be aware of the fact that better training and improved law enforcement techniques will not be enough to combat crime. What is most needed is a change in national attitudes that have surrounded the developing situation. Many factors are responsible for this spread of fear and terror that is the talk of almost every dinner table conversation. Of these, at least three deserve special attention as conditions which have contributed to increased crime. The first of these is the transition from an essentially rural America to an essentially urban America. Family, community, and religious ties that surrounded the America of yesterday are not as binding today. The sanctity of home, and a good name receive less emphasis than they once did. Personal interest in how each citizen fares in his community has lessened with mass migration to the big cities. To a varying degree, mobility has changed emphasis and thinking.

This is evident, too, in the social movements that have been taking place. "Civil disobedience", with all of its nebulous meaning, is accepted in many circles as a praise worthy protest to redress grievances. Yet, when mass protests cease, who can easily assess the impact that disobedience to one law has in the minds of men. There is certainty that with it a precedent has been set to break other laws. There are doctrines expressed in the highest government echelons, too, that one should not be held accountable for grievous misdeeds. Society, it is said, is responsible rather than the individual, and society must remove temptation from its citizens. As a lawyer, I must confess that many of our courts have allowed unwisely sentimentality to overcome reason in dealing with criminals. As a result, police are gravely handicapped in some areas by court rulings which offer more protection to the criminal than to the law-abiding citizen. In the final analysis, however, the battle against crime really will depend on how concerned the average citizen gets about this menace. Crime commissions, and Federal funds can aid, but public indignation is the most effective weapon.

Youngsville Home Demonstration Club Has Annual Picnic

The Youngsville Home Demonstration Club met at the home of Mrs. Stancel Woodlief for their annual picnic Monday, August 9, with nineteen members and one visitor in attendance. The meeting opened with group singing after which Mrs. Gladys Carden gave the devotion. Recreation leaders Mrs. James Young and Mrs. James Smith directed the games. The members were invited into the dining room where a bounteous picnic lunch was served. Mrs. Virginia Jefferys, a former member who now lives in Champaign, Ill., was a guest at the meeting.

Rolesville Deacons Honor Rev. Jones

The Deacons and wives of the Rolesville Baptist Church, entertained The Rev. Crate Jones family on Sunday afternoon from 4 to 5 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Williams. The Jones family who will move to Durham this week, were presented a silver tray as a going-away gift from the group. Other guests attending were Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Pearce and Mr. and Mrs. Norman Davenport of Mackeys.

Choir Practice Mon.

The newly organized Wake Forest Methodist Church choir will meet for practice each Monday night at 7:30 unless conflicting schedules of members cause it to be changed. Anyone interested in joining the choir, is urged to attend practice Monday night.

Beekeepers Meeting

Mr. Jesse Wall will attend the meeting of the N. C. State Beekeepers Association August 13 and 14 at Brevard College in Brevard.
