STUDENT TESTING: USES AND ABUSES

Tests are a teaching responsibility that frequently raises vigorous misunderstanding.

There is no disagreement that frequent measures of learning achievement are needed. Students need to know how they perform. It's obvious that the teacher needs to know. If there is teacher and student, the parents should know, too.

Store Potatoes In Ventilated Place

It's not the growing of Irish potatoes that seems to give Tar Heel gardeners the most trouble. Successfully storing the popular root crop is the hard part.

If you are among the many gardeners who annually lose part of the potato crop to storage rot, there is hope.

One of the first considerations, according to North Carolina State University agricultural extension specialists, is to dig the potatoes at the right time. They suggest that you not dig potatoes intended for storage until the tops are mature.

Here are some other suggestions:

-Don't expose potatoes to the sun for any length of time.

-Place potatoes in well ventilated containers, such half-bushel slatted as baskets.

Store baskets in an area out of the sun where the temperature will be between 60 and 80 degrees. Make sure the potatoes have plenty of ventilation, and leave them to cure for four days.

- For permanent storage, move potatoes to a cooler place, a range of 45 to 50 degrees would be ideal.
