

We always knew that Page was a big boy but we wonder how Vic enlarged those lips.

We hear that Barden Winstead was seen walking around in the rain a few Sunday nights ago on Academy street. He must have been hunting somebody.

Hear! Hear! Virginia Saunders has been seen courting some of the best looking boys lately. Swing it, Virginia.

We hear that Charles Reade Long has been keeping the post office busy with letters to Lumberton and Carthage. Who are the friends, Charlie?

It has been noticed lately that Louise Dickens has lost her Hi-Y pin and that Louis Adams has found it. Ha-ha.

It seems as though Sarah Winstead has been visiting Danville right much of late.

It seems that J. D. Oliver has been keeping Virginia Huddleston's time pretty well occupied lately. Watch out, Bill Murphy.

Seen at the Bethel Hill-Roxboro football game: Annie Mae McWhorter, Kitty Collins, and D'arcy Bradsher yelling for Bethel Hill. Roxboro can't keep what they've had.

Ethel Newell Winstead is following in the footsteps of her older sister when it comes to flirting. She has been seen rolling those big brown eyes at all the freshman boys. Especially Billy Newell and Carl Bowen.

Who is it that Bill Dickens is so interested in. It would be interesting to know, wouldn't it?

Billy West hasn't been seen on Depot street lately. John Harky couldn't possibly be the cause of it could he, Billy?

Bill Clay has been seen making eyes at Vic Black lately.

Woodrow Jones has been going to Durham lately. Who is the lucky girl?

Eloise Newell has been looking out of the side of her eye in physics.

Billy Street has been writing a lot of letters lately to Richmond and Washington.

James Jackson has been trying to catch a ride to Nashville for a long time. Come on, boys, have a heart.

Riley Wade has been seen with Shirley King lately. Watch out, Lulu.

Christmas Is Coming

There's a rumor out; First it only whispered But it persisted Till all doubts were routed, Then it fairly shouted— Christmas is coming.

You'd better be good, girls and boys, Or Santa won't leave you any toys; He'll be certain to know if you fail that test, So study, study, worry a little, but do your best.

And oh you teachers, we won't leave you out, In fact, our warning to you we'd like to shout— Forget about tests; be human, and smile, Or within your abode, Santa won't come a mile.

There's a rumor out; First it only whispered But it persisted—

You'd better be good, better not cry, Or Santa Claus will surely pass you by; Christmas is coming.

—MONDELL HOLLEMAN.

Mrs. Nichols: "Maynard go to the board and write superintendent." Maynard: "I can't."

Mrs. Nichols: "Well, you can try." Maynard: "Ah, I don't know how to spell it."

Mrs. Nichols: "Well, write something."

Maynard: (writing) s-o-m-e-t-h-i-n-g. "Is that right?"

An Irishman was once driving a horse and buggy through a busy street when suddenly the horse lay down in the middle of the street and would not budge. The Irishman, greatly exasperated, shook the reins and exclaimed, "Giddap, giddap, ye lazy critter or I'll drive right over you."

A Frenchman, while touring in England went in a restaurant one morning, and deciding that he wanted some eggs for breakfast, called the waiter. However, when the waiter appeared, he had forgotten the English word for eggs so he said.

The keeper of a large apiary arrived late one morning, and on entering the gate heard yells issuing from the apiary and observed bees flying around. Upon asking his new assistant what the trouble was received the reply that the new apiary had been placed in the apiary and had been yelling all morning.

A man driving along a country road one morning heard something rattle under his car and on getting out of the car he saw a piece of iron in the road. For several minutes he tried unsuccessfully to replace it on his car. Then happening to see a farmer passing by, he asked whether he knew where the piece belonged. The farmer replied, "That didn't come off your car, mister, that's a plow point."

Once the henroost of a Georgia detective was robbed, so the detective obtained a fingerprint of the thief, made an enlarged photograph of it, and went over to the house of the thief and accused him of the theft, showing him at the same time the photograph. When confronted with this evidence the thief confessed and said, "All I wants to know is how you got dat picture of dem corduroy pants I was wearing."
