

ROBBED SISTER STATE.

Governor Elrod Says South Dakota Should Return Money to North Carolina.

Retiring Gov. S. H. Elrod, in his address to the South Dakota legislature last week, denounced in emphatic terms the deal by which that state came in possession of about $25,000 through suit against the state of North Carolina on bonds issued by that state during the carpetbag regime.

South Dakota, Gov. Elrod said, had no right to take the money, and the state university, to which it was given, should not have touched it, because it was tainted.

"I recommend," said the governor, "that the legislature pass an act carrying an appropriation to return the sum of $22,416 to the state of North Carolina. We took it away from our sister state North Carolina simply because the law said we could. Might did not make right in this instance. If the state of South Dakota returns said sum to the state of North Carolina, it will do more to cement the states together than anything that has happened since the civil war. Morally, we have no right to a cent of this money, and we ought to be brave and true enough to give it back."

The retiring governor said it is evident that ingenious schemers are using the state for private ends.

The case of South Dakota vs. North Carolina is the first of similar suits to be brought to compel the several states of the South that floated wildcat bonds during carpetbag times and since repudiated them, to pay them with interest.

An individual cannot sue a state, but one commonwealth can sue another commonwealth. Hence certain holders of bonds have entered into partnership with the state to force payment.

Judge Allen Keeps Record Straight.

The Washington Post having included the shooting of the Asheville fiend who killed five men, supposed to have been Will Harris, in a list of lynchings, Judge Oliver H. Allen of the North Carolina bench, writes the Post as follows:

Editor Post: My attention has just been called to a statement made in your issue of December 30 last concerning the number of lynchings during the year 1906, in which the following occurs: "Asheville, Will Harris, quintuple murder, shot."

This case in no sense should be classed as a lynching, and does the people of Asheville an injustice. As a judge of the Superior Court, I had duly outlawed the man known as Will Harris after he had killed five persons on the streets in Asheville, and he was shot by a posse after he had failed to surrender and while he was firing upon his pursuers. Progress in Kansas.

A Kansas City man has just succeeded in getting a patent on an electric motor fastened on a cow's back, the electricity being generated by a dynamo attached to her tail. It strains the milk and hangs up the pail and the strainer. A small photograph accompanies the outfit and yells "Sow!" when the cow moves. If she kicks, a hinged arm catches the milk stool and lams her over the back.—Oswatimie (Kan.) Globe.

BACK GIVES OUT

Plenty of Lexington Readers Have This Experience.

You tax the kidneys—overwork them—They can't keep up the continued strain.

The back gives out—it aches and pains; Urinary trouble sets in.

Don't wait longer—take Doan's Kidney Pills.

J. H. Brewer, fireman at Vogel Bros. Lumber Co., residing at 935 Oak St., Winston, N. C., says: "The heavy work I do is, I believe, what caused my kidney trouble. My kidneys were much affected, the pains across the small of my back and through my kidneys bothered me considerably and all the medicine I took did me little or no good. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills advertised in our papers, I procured a box. These pills certainly are worthy of a good recommendation, for they are the finest remedy for kidney trouble I ever used."

Puts It Up to Scientist.

Denouncing the doctrine that bodily ills are a mere reflection of the mind, the Rev. M. K. Staple, a Methodist divine, of Anita, Iowa, has issued circulars announcing a lecture on Christian Science. He promises to take to the lecture platform two strychnine tablets, each strong enough to kill, and to swallow one if any Scientist will agree before the audience to swallow the other. Dr. Staple will depend on medical skill to save him and the Scientist may have the consolation of his religion.

Jeweler's Bit of Advice.

"I think I'll have to bring her in and let her choose," said the embarrassed young man, as he looked hopelessly at the diamonds spread out on the table.

"Pardon me for a bit of advice," the jeweler said, earnestly, leaning forward, "but I've had a lot of experience in such matters. If you pick it out yourself, and take it to her, she'll surely be satisfied. Always are. But if she comes here, and sees bigger, handsomer rings, she won't be contented with the ones you can afford. The $500 or $800 ring she sees will stay by her. We've often lost sales that way. I've frequently seen the young woman pick out a ring that the man obviously couldn't afford, and he would find some excuse for not buying it."

Then the young man said he thought he might as well decide on that $110 trifle at once.

Two men, masked, entered the home of a poor old woman aged 73, in New York last week, and after choking her until she consented to show where her little money was, they got the money, and choked her into insensibility, leaving her nearly dead. Her experience will doubtless prove fatal, owing to her great age. Men like this cannot get proper punishment this side of the lake of fire and brimstone.

The Grand Lodge of Masons last week in Raleigh re-elected all the old officers. Lieut. Gov. Francis D. Winston, therefore, remains Grand Master.

Train Robber Confesses.

Percy Martin, who robbed a Pullman car on a Seaboard train near Norlina some days ago, for which crime J. C. Powley was also arrested, writes voluntarily a full confession, exonerating Powley. He says in his confession:

"My occupation was news agent on Chesapeake and Ohio Railway. Was discharged at Huntington, W. Va., for drunkenness about three weeks ago. Went to Washington D. C., and from there to Richmond, Va. Stayed in Richmond two nights and one day, stopped at Davis Hotel. On Sunday night, December 30, I took the passenger train on the Seaboard railway at the Union station, having purchased a ticket to Norlina, and expected to go to Hamlet and get work. I was out of money and only had enough money to take me to Norlina. I got desperate on the train and started to kill myself and then decided to rob the passengers in the Pullman car.

"At some point about twenty-five miles from Norlina I got up and went back into the Pullman, captured the negro porter and made him lock the door of the Pullman and walk in front of me and told him to see what the passengers had. I made one man on the left hand side of the car give me his money and got $138. I saw his diamond ring and got that, too. I got nothing else, but went to another berth on the same side and the last one in the car. I started to go to another berth and the man I robbed told me not to go into the berth as there was only a little boy in there.

"The porter ran back to the rear car, and I suppose notified the conductor, who came in. I threw my gun in his face and made him go back into the other car. I followed on and went out on the platform, and found the conductor of the other car at the door. I thought he had a gun and I shot him, but did it to scare him.

"I jumped off the train and went two or three miles until I came to the Southern railroad and then walked to Summerville, and there saw a negro pumpman and gave him my pistol to let me dry my clothes. I got out of there at 3 p. m. and went to Norfolk. Stayed there until I left Tuesday over the Norfolk and Western to Lynchburg and took the Chesapeake and Ohio and came to Huntington. I only had about $60 when I got here and turned over about $40 to my wife and told her I had won the money."

He Was Educated.

A negro was discovered carrying a very large number of books, which brought forth the inquiry: "Going to school?" "Yes, sar." "Do you study all those books?" "No, sar; dey's my brudder's. Ise a ignorant kind er nigger' sides him, boss. He has gone and ciphered clean through addition, partition, subtraction, distraction, abomination, justification, creation, amputation and adaptation.

This man bought a supply of tobacco without acquainting himself with the distinctive taste of SCHNAPPS Tobacco, which has the cheering qualities that gratify his desire to chew, and at less expense than cheap tobacco.

SCHNAPPS has been advertised in this paper so that every chewer has had an opportunity to get acquainted with the facts and know that drugs are not used to produce the cheering quality found in the famous Piedmont country fire-cured tobaccos, and that SCHNAPPS is what he ought to chew. Still there are chewers who accept other and cheaper tobaccos that do not give the same pleasure.

Some day they'll get a taste of the real Schnapps—they'll realize what enjoyment they've missed by not getting SCHNAPPS long ago—then they'll feel like kicking themselves.

SCHNAPPS is sold everywhere in 5 cent cuts, and 10 and 15 cent plugs. Be sure you get the genuine.
