There were more than fifty carriages in the procession, including those of the mayor of Hartford, the Rev. Charles A. Goodwin, a cousin of Mr. Morgan's, and other distinguished citizens of the city. Two large auto-mobile trucks carried the flowers. Over the seven-foot of earth allotted to the financier as his last resting place, there had ben erected a large white tent, church-like in appearance with a chancel at one end. In the center of this chancel was the grave, its sides lined with red roses. Beyond completely covering the wall of the tent in brilliant color were heaped the teral tributes-those of the family, German Emperor William's withered wreath brought from Rome,
