

AMONG THE MAGAZINES

the clash of interests can be settled only by war, that in such a clash of interests treaties are of no account, and that the endeavor to regard such treaties as binding is hypocrisy.

The United States as a Peacemaker.
The eye of faith looks through the thick veil of the future to the time when the mediation proposal of the President of the United States, and the splendid example of the Peace-Treaties ratified through the instrumentality of Secretary Bryan, will loom up as the grandly dominant fact of the era.

Those who believe an ultimate solution of the war problem by American mediation as impossible, may be reminded that it is not in any way so unlikely as war itself seemed eight weeks ago.

That first declaration of war struck the human race like a bolt from a clear sky.
Why may not peace yet beam forth as unexpectedly as war?

Hope has become a world necessity.
The first requisite to the final answer to the tragic enigma now propounded to the race is to realize its complexity and its magnitude.

There have been other "world-wars," but this one occupies a place of terrible uniqueness because never before has the political definition of the world been so comprehensive.

The conquests of Alexander and of Caesar were only world wars in the sense that they included practically all the then known areas of civilization.

The coalition of Austria, Prussia, France and Sweden against Great Britain and Hanover was world-war—it set men fighting one another on both sides of the globe, and its Western Hemisphere phase was the conflict that was decided by the capture of Quebec.

In the November Woman's Home Companion great emphasis is laid upon a chapter regarding the "Woman and Labor" in which the suggestion is made that women can stop war if they are given greater voice in the management of governments.

There is, perhaps, no woman who could look down upon a battlefield covered with slain, but the thought would find in her "So many mothers' sons! So many young bodies brought into the world to lie there! So many months of weariness and pain while bones and muscles were shaped within. So many hours of anguish and struggle that their breath might be! So many baby mouths drawing life at women's breasts—all this, that men might live with glazed eyeballs, and swollen faces, and dead, blue, enclosed mouths, and great limbs tossed; and we cry, 'with out an inexorable cause, this must not be! No woman who is a woman says not of a human body, 'It is nothing.'

"Woman will end war when her voice is fully and clearly heard in the governance of states—because, on this one point, and on this point almost alone, the knowledge of woman, simply as woman, is superior to that of man. She knows the history of human flesh; she knows its cost; she does not.

In a besieged city, it might well happen that the sculptor might seize upon statues and marble carvings from public buildings and galleries and hurl them in to stop the breaches made in the ramparts by the enemy, unconsciously, merely because they came first to hand, not valuing them more than had they been paving stones. One man, however, could not do this—the sculptor, who, though there might be no work of his own chisel among them, yet knew what each of these works of art had cost, knew by experience the long years of struggle and study and the infinitesimal toll which had gone to the shaping of even one limb, to the carving of even one perfected outline, he could never so use them without thought or care. Instinctively he would seek to throw in household goods, even gold and silver, all the city held, before he sacrificed its works of art.

"Men's bodies are our woman's works of art. Given to us power to control, we will never carelessly throw them in to fill up the gaps in ambitions and greed. The thought would never come to us as women, 'Cast in men's bodies; settle the thing so!'"

Size and Power of German Howitzers.
The one big surprise for military experts thus far developed in the European war is the effectiveness of the heavy guns of the German field artillery, says the November Popular Mechanics Magazine, in an illustrated article. Never before have such terrific engines of annihilation been carried by an invading army as those used in the assaults upon the forts at Liège.

It had long been realized that more powerful guns would be needed in the field if modern inland fortifications were to be made to fall before an army, but there was apparent no way of doing it until the Germans had made all but the hardest of paved highways impassable for them. But the development of an internal combustion tractor solved the transportation problem, while that of hauling heavy weights over soft ground was solved by the invention of a detachable tread for the rims of gun carriage wheels. With these for use on bad roads, it has been possible for the Germans to rush to the front their enormous 11-inch howitzers which are as nearly as great as the American 12-inch coast defense guns and weigh 20 tons.

The ingenuity of the Krupp engineers did not stop here. They succeeded in building a gun able to hurl projectiles through steel and concrete walls, such as those at Liège, almost as easily as if the works were of lath and plaster. The story of carnage and destruction wrought by a single shell from this masterpiece burdens the ergency bills and credits, is being discussed. It is suggested that after the deputies have finished sitting here they should go back to Bordeaux.

WOULD INVADE CANADA

German Ambassador Declares That No Question Has Been Raised on Canada.
Washington, Oct. 25.—Germany's right to land troops in Canada, if possible, and thus secure at least a temporary foothold on the American continent was upheld today by count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador. He declared that as Canada was sending soldiers to fight against his country it would be no infringement on Monroe Doctrine if Germany should invade Canada.

Discussing his note to the State Department giving assurances that American colonization in event of victory, the ambassador said only South America was referred to. There never has been any question raised, he said, as to possible German attempts to seek colonization in any other part of the American hemisphere.

GERMANS ARE DESPERATE

Making Every Effort to Shake Themselves of Allies, and Get Away.
Paris, Oct. 25.—The Germans at La Basse, are making desperate efforts to shake themselves loose from the clasp of the allies, who meanly their line of communications with Armentieres. Both armies have received reinforcements but the allied lines today withstood formidable shock and delivered severe counter attacks.

Gen. Von Kluck's army, which was thought to be in Belgium has not moved from its position on the Aisne, but three other German armies have completely changed their fronts. Grand Duke Albrecht, of Wurtemberg now commands the forces in Belgium, while General Von Buelow is further down the army of Crown Prince Rupprecht. Bavaria is stretched out a line of trenches on an extended battle front between the Somme and the Aisne and from Rheims to the Argonne region.

In this last named region the fighting is desultory. The position of the opposing armies are too strong to permit of successful assaults, and the campaign has become one of patient endurance.

The fighting in the Argonne forests has been very heavy. Two French aviators today pursued and brought down a German aeroplane east of Amiens.

REDMOND ADDRESSES IRISH

Tells Them That Despite Immigration Ireland is Still Fighting.
Belfast, Ireland, Oct. 25.—Addressing a meeting of Irish volunteers today John E. Redmond, Irish Nationalist leader, said that when the Irish government came into being the volunteers must be absolutely at the disposal of that government. He declared that in spite of emigration Ireland should maintain her place as a fighting nation.

"Ireland has rights," said Mr. Redmond, "are not to be defended merely within the Irish shores. Ireland would humiliated if, after the war, it had to guard its coast and her liberties had been guarded by the sacrifice of other men, while Irishmen remained at home."

Thirty-five thousand men from all parts of Ireland have joined the army since the beginning of the war, Mr. Redmond said.

Ernest Lagarde, for 45 years professor of English Literature and Modern Languages at Mount St. Mary's College, here, died today. He was born at New Orleans 65 years ago, and during the Civil War served in the Confederate Army. After the war he edited newspapers in Richmond, Va., and New Orleans.

Imagination. Profound secrecy has clothed the details of the construction of the machine, which was invented some eight years ago, tested and for obvious reasons subsequently pronounced a failure. It fires a 16-inch projectile, and when used at Liège against Fort Loncin was mounted on a base of concrete having a 100-foot radius. A tunnel leading to a subterranean chamber was excavated some distance at the rear, from which the gun was fired by electricity.

Heroic Belgium.
Many Americans have made their first approach to Europe along the river Scheldt and will never forget the lovely outlines of the Cathedral tower, which Napoleon compared to Michelangelo, and the beautiful quality of the notes of the chimes that rained melody upon the old city of Antwerp. That city appealed to the eye, and still more to the imagination, for it has had a tragic and heroic history. Many nations have assailed it; a dozen times it has been besieged. It has lived through appalling wars but it has survived to regain a prosperity portrayed in the charts of all the countries of the world set in tiles along the walls of the beautiful Bourse.

And now Antwerp has fallen again, after a heroic fight against overwhelming odds. Its beauty, like that of Louvain, Malines and other historic towns stored with the treasures of medieval architecture and art, has been blurred, but it has added a glorious chapter to history. Belgium is a little country but a great nation. It stood in the path of an almost invincible military power; its fields have been ravaged; some of its cities have been almost completely blotted out; its soldiers have been killed by the tens of thousands; it is said that three millions of its people are in exile. But, blurred and all but crushed, it has stood as a heroic protagonist of the principle of nationality—a principle not identified either with extent of territory or magnitude of population. It has illustrated again the indomitable spirit of humanity; unafraid in the presence of the most certain disaster, undismayed at the approach of almost certain death. Wars are made big by the size of armies and the number of battles; but wars are made great by the human qualities they display. Belgium has struck the highest note that has been heard above the din of these awful conflicts. She had nothing to gain; she had everything to lose. She did not stop to count the cost; she obeyed that instinctive sense of honor which is an absolute standard and imposes an absolute duty. She has not stopped to reason why.

She has been the victim of one of the greatest crimes against any nation in the history of the world. What her inevitable fate may be no man can foresee. Those who believe in a divine justice in the world will not hesitate to affirm that such a spirit as hers cannot be buried in the ruins of cities nor crushed by the iron hand of war.

From Outlook of Oct. 21.

CONDITIONS ARE GRATIFYING

Financial Circles Anticipate Better Times—Wiping Out of Deficit Causes Better Feelings.

New York, Oct. 25.—One of the most gratifying features of the past week in financial circles was the wiping out of the deficit in cash reserves by New York banks, and the substitution of an excess amounting to about $3,400,000. These institutions reported a deficit of almost $45,000,000, two weeks after the commencement of the European war began.

It is clear, however, that it is trade recession that is sending cash into bank reserves in increasing volume. The money market relaxes correspondingly from week to week. Clearing house certificates and emergency currency are being retired. As yet very moderate investment has been stimulated.

The prospect of the Federal Reserve law becoming operative by mid-November promises further large additions to available credits.

A pronounced slump in foreign exchange was a feature of the week. The ambassador said only South America was referred to. There never has been any question raised, he said, as to possible German attempts to seek colonization in any other part of the American hemisphere.

Suggestion of British acceptance of short term notes from American debtors, coupled with action towards the liquidation of British mills, promises excellent results on the most difficult problems still unsolved.

The opposition developed to freight rate increase grows larger, and chilled confidence that the Federal Reserve would be granted. Railroad abstention from buying of materials emphasizes the prostration of the steel trade. For the present the grain movement is serving to sustain the revenues on railroads.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

Price of Cotton Has Again Dropped.
New Orleans, Oct. 25.—The price of cotton again dropped to lower levels (last week; middling spots closing at 6 and 1-2 cents a pound, the lowest of the week and the lowest in several years, while January contracts at one time stood at 6.95 and closed at 7 cents. In the interior, prices at many markets went down around six cents, Dallas quoting at that level after the middle of the week.

A factor that contributed not a little to the decline was the refusal of insurance companies to take war risks in cotton shipped in neutral bottoms to neutral ports. English and American English companies taking such risks, it being understood that the ground for this attitude was the claim that much cotton was finding its way to Germany through neutral countries.

The influence of this stand was to be seen in the week's exports, which were smaller than for the preceding week, the figures being 32,186 bales against 57,829 last week and 445,845 last year. For the season now amount to 397,475 bales against 2,079,535 bales during the same period last year and 1,371,275 during the same period two years ago.

The conference this week between leading financiers of the United States and England will be watched by the cotton trade with great interest because of the growing belief that they will lead to plans that will accomplish the reopening of the cotton future markets.
