THEATRICAL

"That the 'Children of the Ghetto' is in no sense sectarian or racial play; but a drama of universal appeal is demonstrated forcibly by the fact that Israel Zangwill's masterpiece has been endorsed by record runs, wherever it has played on two continents. It is, in fact, a world drama of universal appeal to all classes and conditions. It deals with basic things that underlie the main-springs of human life. Such a play cannot but fall to receive in full measure the interest of nation-wide audiences. The Wilham Fox picturized version of 'The Children of the Ghetto' produced by Frank Powell, which is at the Victoria Theatre today, presents the great character actor, Wilton Lackaye, in his original role, the part he created, of the aged Rabbi. Mr. Lackaye makes of this part a marvelously minute bit of characterization. His make-up has been declared to be the most faithful to type ever carried out. The powerful cast supporting Mr. Lackaye, and the splendidly conceived mountings used, all combine to make 'The Children of the Ghetto' one of the most significant and impressive screen-plays ever made.

At the Grand Today. One of the best one-part dramas that has lately been released is the Biograph, "To Have and To Lose," showing at the Grand today. There is undeniable power in this production, where a lonely man conquers the hunger of his right for the woman he loves. Franklin Ritchie as the lonely prospector imbues the character with just the right feeling, and Isabel Bea and Frank Newburg and Walter Woodin round out a well selected cast.

"The two-part Lubin 'A Delayed Reformation' is the story of the devoted wife who gets herself into trouble by shielding her criminal brother. This drama is beautifully staged and is well presented by a capable cast headed by Lillie Leslie supported by Jack Stanley, Joseph Smiley and Ann Carmichael. Some excellent action takes place in the two part offering 'The Forged Testament,' a product of the Majestic studio, in which Chas. Cleary is easily the lead, supported by Signe Auen, Olga Gray and Cora Drew.

The story is of a man who married a woman for her money and at her death forged her signature to a will bequeathing her fortune to her property. The forgery is discovered and how is most interesting to watch. Closing is a comedy, 'Ethel's Dog-gone Luck,' full of amusing plot complications caused by "too much dogs."

"Exploits of Elaine" Today. In the 12th episode of 'The Exploits of Elaine' heading today's bill at the Bijou, Wong Sin, a Chinese adventurer of the lowest type, is introduced into the story for the first time. He starts a campaign to recoup his fortune by playing on the credulity of Elaine Dodge, and proceeds to hatch an elaborate scheme to blackmail her. Also, there is the ever-present of rare scientific treatment by Craig Kennedy, who again exploits a new thing "under the sun," "the blood crystals." Today's episode marks the point where the threads begin to untangle, and two weeks from today will come the great denouement, and the mystery of the "Clutching Hand" will be solved.

"Retrieving the Past" is a mammoth two-reel United Drama that comes next and features popular Jack Henley in the leading role, of a humanitarian drama that will appeal to every patron of the show.

Inimitable Hank Mann comes next with Alice Howell and Dick Smith, nicknamed "Daredevil Dick" in one of the very greatest L-Ko screams of the year. "A Stool Pigeon's Revenge." Hank is right in the middle of the funny doings, and you'll scream throughout the whole reel.

The Animated Weekly, also on today's bill, besides presenting many interesting scenes from the theatres of war and other events of international importance, shows the inauguration of President Graham at Chapel Hill, which was attended by Secretary Joseph Daniels.
