THEATRICAL

Charming, beautiful, handsome Helen Gardner is the star in a three-reel Broadway Vitagraph feature, "Miss Jekyll and Madame Hyde," on at the Grand today. Just imagine a young girl stepping from the quiet seclusion of the convent into her father's luxurious home and the conventional life of the world, and you will have a picture of Madeline Jekyll. She meets Baron Stana, a sinister, yet distinguished looking man and finds her father has promised her hand in marriage to Daggerts, a powerful politician, who, in reward, has agreed to see that Jekyll is elected governor. Now you have the plot in brief, and with such a notable cast as Helen Gardner, Paul Scardon, J. H. Lewis, Gladden James and Roland Osborne, the balance is left to your own judgment as to the quality this cast is capable of producing. The production is under the personal direction of the well known producer, Mr. Chas. L. Gaskill. "Life's Mysteries," is the title of a Mina comedy which is also part of today's program, and the first taken at the new Mina studio at Los Angeles, so you can expect to see a rousing comedy that will please beyond a doubt.

The Bijou Today.

Years ago the classiest melodrama on the speaking stage was played by the eminent Shaperean, Robert Mantell, in every hamlet, town and city in the United States. The title was "The Marble Heart." In a remarkable fourreel production at the Bijou today you can see this great dramatic spectacle reproduced with a lavishness of scenery that was impossible on the speaking stage, and with the leading part in the hands of no less an eminent star than the great King Baggot, who has triumphed in some of filmdom's greatest productions within the past few

The story is too well known to need an introduction, but it depicts the conflict between a heart of stone and a great and noble love which is as vital today as it was in ancient Greece.
