The President spoke before several will be taught first aid to the wounded, bandage making, telegraphy and other wartime arts. The encampment is being held under the auspices of the women's section of the Navy League.

Secretaries Baker and Daniels and a arge group of government officials and army and navy officers were inluded in the audience. The President's speech followed the formal raising of an American flag over the encampment.

He said in part:

American Ideals Peculiar. You have come together to be prepared for any unusual duty which Amricans may call upon you to perform, out what has moved you to do this? Your duty to your country. But what s the foundation of that duty? What to you conceive America to be? When you come to the last searching analysis we do not owe any duty except to those things that we believe in, and the glory of performing our duty towards America is that we believe in America; and we believe in America because-I venother peoples and other governmentsthis government was established with special purpose such as no other government ever avowed. This government was established in order that justice and liberty might belong to every man whom our institutions could touch, and not only that justice and liberty should belong to America, but that, so far as America was concerned and her influence involved, they should be extended to mankind everywhere. So the inspiration of serving America is a very profound inspiration.
