

TERRORIZING EXPERIENCES IN STORE FOR AMERICANS

In the Baptism of German Bullets and Bombs Even the Bravest Man Will Stagger

NOISE ITSELF FRIGHTFUL

All the Devilries of Destruction Will be Used as an Introductory of "Hate"

THE DEADLY GAS IS THERE Germans Will Use Every Weapon Designed to Kill

British Headquarters in France, July 4.—(Staff Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—The arrival of the first contingents of the American army in France serves to recall the fact that the United States is entering a war already old and wise-wise with the nearly bought wisdom of three long adventurous years—and steeped in all the diabolical wickedness that incantation delving into the deviltries of destruction can bring to it.

Having escaped the first terrors of weapons which German science had evolved through toiling years of military preparation, the American divisions will nevertheless plunge eventually into a seething cauldron which has grown from the unavoidable policy of "fighting the devil with fire." They will have quickly to learn not only to take the awful German frightfulness with calm endurance, but to return it with an ever increasing measure.

First of all when they take their place, will come the baptism of fire from the noisy black high-explosive German shells that scream in from afar and burst with terrifying reports—sometimes in most unexpected places. The Germans are great believers both in noise and high explosives. They even mix their adored "H-E" with their shrapnel shells which break high in the air and send their bullets showering in a conical spray of an angry winter wind. The American soldiers will learn to distinguish the individual songs of the various shells for there is not the slightest doubt that the moment he hears a whining whiz in the "line," the Germans will turn every available calibre of weapon against them in a flourish of introductory "hate." They will come over in order—these shrieking, grumbling shells—ranging in size all the way from the nasty little pip-squeaks or whizzbangs, up through the four-point-twos, the five-point-nines and then on to what the British call "the big ones" and "the big stuff"—the eight and ten inch howitzer shells and the projectiles from heavy calibre long range naval guns, known without affection as "Whistling Percy."

There will be little opportunity to hear a "Big Bertha," for those famous old 42-centimeter howitzers are seldom used nowadays. It is believed that the Germans planned to bombard the British trenches with these shells, but the British advance on Easter Monday last put a stop to that particularly nefarious scheme against the already badly battered little Arris cattered city.

RAILROADS ARE NATIONALIZED

Daniel Willard Says Statement Epitomizes Wonderful Story of Railroads in War Time.

(Commerce and Finance, July 25.) "The railroads of the United States," said Daniel Willard, chairman of the Committee on Transportation of the Council of National Defense, "are nationalized." His simple statement epitomizes the whole wonderful story of the American railroads in war time. The 693 roads in forty-eight States operating some 263,000 miles of line have cooperated with an alacrity and enthusiasm in every movement for economy and efficiency that has been suggested—either by the Council of National Defense or the Railroads' War Board, headed by Fairfax Harrison, that is gratifying. The results speak for themselves.

For instance, passenger schedules have been curtailed on many of the roads. Thus far, a saving of 16,267,023 miles of train service a year has resulted in the one item of coal this will result in a saving of over a million tons a year. The Pennsylvania lines alone have eliminated 3,300,000 train miles of passenger service, the Erie and the B. & O. will save together nearly that much and the New England lines have cut off 4,847,232 miles in passenger train service. This releases both men and rolling stock for use in handling freight and troops when needed.

Since the roads have been on a war basis they have handled by far the greatest traffic in history. Hundreds of trains have been handled without appreciably disturbing ordinary schedules. Special consignments of freight for the Government has been rushed through without a minute's delay. When the work of railway organization for war began there was a car shortage of 14,300. Within one month that number had been reduced to 105,127 and a month later it had dropped to 77,444. And traffic was increasing all the time.

Admitted efficiency in unloading and returning cars which they have reached their destination and other economies in loading it is stated that the railroads gained three billion train miles in one month or the equivalent of 77,000 cars in capacity. The facilities that have been added to American railroads through the war are greater than those of any other country in the world. It is a wonderful record.

It is a striking example. The whole world was shown when Germany first released those poison clouds during their second attack on Ypres when the Allies, little suspecting the gas, had no protection against it. The horror of those days when men engulfed by the lethal waves died agonizingly in the trenches never to be forgotten. But the manner in which the Canadian troops rallied and prevented the Germans breaking through in what they hoped would be a victorious march to the sea at Boulogne, will ever be one of the most thrilling stories of the world war. Nowadays the British fair-bathe the Germans in every form of gas whenever the slightest opportunity offers and prisoners all say their losses are heavy. Gas attacks have been alarmingly frequent. In fact, gas is creeping banks of fog, is shot over in bombs that suddenly explode in the trenches and at entrances to dugouts, and offers but poor protection to the fighting men against gas that constantly are becoming more powerful. Bolting and blazing oil drums which they find exploding about them in sudden and incendiary fury, heavy streams of melted lead, and other agencies of the dread chickens of frightfulness that are daily being home to the German roost.
