BIG MEALS DON'T MEAN STRENGTH DE-CLARES PEPLAC EXPERT

Its Not What We Eat But What We Digest that Counts

It is not how much we eat but how much is thoroughly digested and assimilated that counts in the upbuilding of health and strength," yesterday declared the Peplac Expert, who is now in Wilmington, at the Bellamy Drug Store. "Really, people frequently eat too much rather than too little," the Peplac Expert continued. until food is thoroughly assimilated does it begin the work of making tissue, muscle and bone, in order to have gestive tract must be in healthy condition. Few people realize what a great per cent of the digestive process takes place after the food leaves the stomach. It is the failure of thorough digestion and consequent fermentation of food that causes auto-intoxication that is making such heavy ravages on the health of the average American. "Auto-intoxication," the Peplac Expert explained, "is the slow self-poisoning of the cital organs, they fail to throw off the waste matter that results from incomplete digestion and toxinswhich are actually poisons-form in the body.
