"We secured a good strong committee of younger Chinese headed by C. T. Wong, former vice president of the Chinese senate," Mr. Arnold said. "Eight teams were organized under team captains, who were American college graduates. These Chinese teams worked hard and 25,000 Chinese were added to the Red Cross membership from Shanghai and environs.

"P. K. Che, secretary of the Chinese world's students' confederation, carried off the honors for his team for the largest number of members secured. Chu Chi Chein, former minister of the interior, piled up 2,000 members to his credit. Chang Chien, former minister of commerce and agriculture, added a good number of members.

"There was also a Chinese woman's team, headed by beautiful Chinese girl graduates from American colleges. This team secured over 2,000 memberships. Many Chinese schools in Shanghai joined as junior auxiliaries.

"A number of large Chinese companies joined with their entire staffs. The Commercial Press with 2,000 employes store arranged that all its employes reteams expressed surprise at the gen-
