

With Wilmington Shipbuilders

The new administration building of the Warreco company on Northeast river at Hilton having been completed the latter part of last week, the members of the office force moved into their new quarters Monday morning. While the administration building was under construction the executive staff and clerks transacted the company's business in offices located in a building formerly used as a dwelling house, which is situated on the property of the Liberty company, adjacent to the Warreco company's plant, but now they are sheltered in a spacious building of two stories. The ground floor of the administration building is devoted to the drafting department. At a later date it is planned to erect an additional wing to the administration building, provided the company's business increases, as it no doubt will, in view of such an expansion.

At present S. G. Rosenberg, joint manager with E. W. Darling of the Warreco company, is directing affairs at the plant. Mr. Darling is now in Washington. He has spent the greater part of the time since the Warreco company was located here two months ago away from the scene of action, but he is expected to arrive in the city next week and he and Mr. Rosenberg will then give their entire time to directing the construction work necessary before actual shipbuilding can commence. With the opening of the plant's new office building an addition was made to the plant's executive force in the person of Government Inspector Bedell, assistant supervisor of engineering, of Washington. Mr. Bedell, having been detailed to this post from the capital city, arrived in Wilmington Monday morning and took up his abode with the Warreco company. Next to the ways of a woman, a government official's life is the most uncertain thing to remain in Wilmington several months unless he is directed to another post in the meantime.

Construction of the Warreco company's ways, from which seven or eight concrete steamers will be launched shortly after the New Year, is progressing rapidly. Each of the seven steamers will have a length of 130 feet and a tonnage of 1,000. They will be launched sideways when completed, just as the concrete ships to be constructed at the Liberty shipyard will go into the water, but the ways at the Warreco yard differ from the ways being constructed for the larger concrete vessels in that they lie parallel with the river bank, while the Liberty yard's ways are built at right angles with the river. This method of launching removes the necessity of cutting slots into the river bank, as the boats will be shoved out into the river proper when finished. The seven steamers are to be constructed almost simultaneously. They will lie behind the other in their cradles on the ways, which extend back a distance of 250 feet from the river bank, and will be splashed into the Cape Fear one after the other, like a file of ducks slipping sidewise into the water.

The Warreco company has secured an ideal location for a shipyard. Immediately off the end of the ways a water depth of 16 to 20 feet is found, which is destined to play no small part in the long and tedious process of dredging so frequently necessary at other shipyards. Further out towards the center of the channel, the river depth is 25 feet, which affords sufficient draught for much larger vessels.

Messrs Rosenberg and Darling, both formerly of Chicago, are builders of great experience. They have spent the greater part of their lives constructing concrete and stone edifices in the Windy City and Great Lakes region, and the step from building houses on the city and to houses on the water is not a long one. They are both young men, comparatively, but they are both men of knowledge of concrete construction work. As organizers of the Warreco company, they are gathering about themselves a corps of efficient workers which is destined to play no small part in ship building of the next few years along the Cape Fear. An announcement of the company's officials has not yet been given out, pending final details of organization which have not been completed up to date, but as Mr. Darling and Mr. Rosenberg are rapidly winding up matters along this line, such an announcement is expected to be made public at an early date, and with the executive staff filled out and each of the company's officials at his desk in the new administration building, the Warreco company will be "shipshape" and ready to enter earnestly into the construction of river vessels.

Lydia M. Dunham O'Neil has beautifully improved the concrete ship in the following lines: Sands that were once the sand of the sea, we go to the sea again; Not where the seaweed trails its length around the bodies of sailormen; Not where the bones of the dead drift by, not where the white wrecks go. But high we ride on the outbound tide, high over the sands below.

Sands that were mixed with salt and foam, in the days when the world was young, Look on the face of man began, or ever we heard his tongue explain, A dream was born in his mighty brain, A word on his waiting lips, And the grains of sand beneath his hand, he molded them into ships.

The Liberty concrete yard here got into The Emergency Fleet News, of official publication of the shipping board at Philadelphia, this week with the following notice: "In September, according to The Stone Shipbuilding company, Wilmington, N. C., the pile driving crews at the yard drove twice as many piles as were put down in August and three times as many as were driven in July. Sixty-foot piles are being driven and The Stone Shipbuilding company says that the hammers are not stopped when the sticks are going down at the rate of two feet a tick but that there is no halt till the maximum penetration is two inches at a blow. Two cents have been started among the pile drivers by General Manager Ferguson of the yard. In one a championship flag is the prize and in the other an award of money is made to the winning crew. Flags are offered for the speediest work on land and water and they have changed hands rapidly."

"FREEMAN MEMORIAL ACRES." East Carolina May Carry Out Dead Farm Agent's Wishes. (Special Star Correspondence.) Kinston, Oct. 22.—"Plant Freeman memorial acres," may become the motto of progressive farmers and agricultural department workers in this section. The farm deforestation agents would have the East Carolina planters manifest their liking for Robert W. Freeman, who died at Wilson a few days ago, by "boosting acres" the work which he had started. Freeman, district agent for about a fifth of the state, co-operating closely with the experts in the coast district beyond his, was giving greatly of his time to having idle acres turned into wheat fields. The section can "bread itself," was Freeman's theory. He wanted to make wheat a staple equal in importance with tobacco, cotton and corn.

DEATH OF VIVIAN BEST IS SAD BLOW TO WARSAW FRIENDS

(Special Star Correspondence.) Warsaw, Oct. 22.—It was with sadness that news of the death of Vivian Best, only son of John W. Best, was received here Saturday. The young man, who was 23 years of age, had been ill for several weeks with pneumonia and other complications following an attack of influenza at Camp Lee, Petersburg, Va., and his father as well as his young wife had been with him most of the time and were with him at the end. At one time hopes for his recovery were maintained, and his death was a great blow to friends and relatives here, all of whom have the sympathy of the community. The young soldier was married a short while before his entrance into military training a few months ago, to Miss Alma Steadman of Alabama, who with his father, J. W. Best, a sister, Miss Olivia Best and two little half sisters, Mary Buford and Evelyn Best, as well as a number of uncles, an aunt, and cousins of this place survive. The body will be brought here Tuesday and interment will be in the local cemetery.

WARSAW OVER THE TOP

Warsaw, Oct. 22.—Warsaw and Warsaw township went over the top in the fourth Liberty loan drive, but it is feared that the county as a whole missed it, by a narrow margin, on account of the community's falling under its quota on account of the influenza epidemic, but all honor is due them for the splendid care they gave their sick, even if they missed their quota in the bond sale. The bank of Beulaville, for the first time, sold their quota in the bond sale. The bank of Beulaville, for the first time, sold their quota in the bond sale. BLOODHOUNDS TRAIL NEGRO WHO IS HELD FOR BURGLARY

(Special Star Correspondence.) Warsaw, Oct. 22.—Considerable excitement was occasioned when D. W. Hobbs discovered on going to his store early in the morning that a negro had been having been effected by the cutting away of an entire plateglass panel in the door, a bucket of molasses, an old coat and an ax, figuring as the tools used. As the store, which is a department store, handling dry goods, clothing, shoes and millinery had been burglarized on several occasions, Mr. Hobbs determined to run the culprit down for this last offense, and to this end allowed no one to enter until bloodhounds, for which he sent to Raleigh, arrived. They reached here at noon, and after a short hunt, went immediately to the home of a negro, named Jim Bob Middleton, and from there proceeded to the tobacco stemmy, where the negro was at work, and singled him out. The negro was arrested and in a trial before Judge Ponceville, was found guilty and bound over to court under $400 bond.

Morton's Kentucky Belles come forward today with their second bill, one that has never been presented at the Royal before, a roaring farce comedy with music, entitled "Hen Pecked." This is one of the banner bills in the 1918 repertoire of the Kentucky Belles, and is one in which the comedy is especially strong, and will bring roars of laughter throughout the entire performance.

New specialty acts will be presented by Gager and Trent—"Six Feet of Comedy." The DeGraces, in novelty entertaining and acrobatic acts; Burt and Bridges the nifty instrumentalists, and Morton and Burt, Crazzylogue artists. The bill will show new scenery throughout, new costumes from beginning to end, and new songs and dancer numbers.

An exceptional special attraction in pictures—one that every patron should come early enough to see, will be those old favorites Mabel Normand and Roscoe Arbuckle—better known as "Fatty and Mabel" in the greatest two reel Keystone comedy they ever made "Bright Lights." To welcome the return of these old favorites in their good old Keystone slapstick comedies, should be the pleasure of every patron of the Royal today or tomorrow.

Norma Talmadge, the famous Select star, will appear at the Grand Theater today, in "Ghosts of Yesterday," adapted from "Two Women" the successful drama by Rupert Hughes. In this picture Miss Talmadge plays two roles; first, the lovable little seamstress who redeems the young waster from a spendthrift's life and a suicide's grave, and second a wanton cabaret singer who resembles her in the first flesh but is most unlike her in her nature.

Along with Norma Talmadge's fame as one of the leading emotional actresses of the screen, she has established an enviable high mark for the elaborateness of her Select Star Series productions. In "Ghosts of Yesterday," she has exceeded even that superb record by the costliness of the sets introduced into this picture. The interior of the Elai Tabarin, the internationally famous cabaret resort of Paris, was reproduced with especial fidelity since this is the scene of perhaps the most stirring bits in this thrilling photodrama.

IS PROMOTED FROM SERGEANT TO MAJOR IN LESS THAN YEAR (Special Star Correspondence.) Kinston, Oct. 22.—Few soldiers have been promoted as rapidly as E. W. B. Happer, brother of M. M. Happer, a local alderman, even in this war. Less than a year and a half ago Happer was a sergeant in the regular army, with some years of service to his credit. He had achieved in the tropics as a major in the states. Today he is a major, having passed the grades of first sergeant, second and first lieutenant and captain and bridged the gulf between canvas leggings and gold collar insignia through merit alone. Major Happer is now stationed at a training camp in this country. He was formerly a resident of LaGrange. He is a native of Norfolk but his family now reside in this state.

Beaufont the Best Drink at All Founts

Stepped up to the fountain the other day and when the man behind asked me what I would have I couldn't think of anything that would satisfy me—was sick of all the other insipid, zestless drinks that I had been getting, so I told the man to serve me the drink he thought was best. And Oh—Boy! talk about your drink that hit the spot I got it. It looked like Champagne and had the sparkle—I asked the clerk what it was. He told me it was B-E-A-U-F-O-N-T Ginger Ale, one of the most popular drinks he served, and you can bet I believed him.

Take my advice and don't let yourself go by a fountain without going in to give this real Ginger Ale a trial—you'll be "delighted" just as I was. "Beaufont Ginger Ale is real Ginger Ale." Yours truly, Jack Wise
