Good-Bye To The Shadows. Gray days of November, but on the sunrise hills

The song of good-by, shadows, with all your dreadful ills! Good-by to the shadows, For love has won the fight

And men go forth in music To meet the joys of light! Life only whispers trouble, of joy it shouts and sings,

And o'er the hills of morning the lark to heaven wings, Good-bye to the shadows, For the right has won the day, And death has passed from battle, And tears are wiped away!

The darkness brings the daylight, the shadow brings the sun, And all the world is happy for peace at last is won.

Good-by to the shadows, And now strong arms shall take The tasks of love and duty For better living's sake!

The women contribute more than they otherwise would, they study missions and are intelligent as to the work, and they act as a stimulus to the churches in their contributions to missions.

"The women hold their annual state meeting in March. Their last annual report shows that they contributed last year over $60,000 to missions. Hitherto they have confined their work to missions, but at their last meeting they added Christian education, and they will be a power in raising the million dollars for the equipment and endowment of the Baptist schools of the state, which is the giganic task
