

THEATRICAL

Saturday, December 14, Harvey D. Orr will offer the patrons of the Academy of Music, matinee and night, the merry musical comedy, "The Million Dollar Doll." This new musical offering has been described as a jingling, joyful comedy with sparkling music and pretty girls.

The cast is headed by Messrs. Busby and Burch, two comedians who stand in the front rank of fun makers, and are supported by a cast of principals, all of whom have won recognition in the best musical comedy of the day. A chorus of 25, real singers and dancers, with a rightful title of "Beauty sort, with special elaborate scenery and special harmony singing. This show comes well recommended from every manager who has played it, and will undoubtedly result in large business at the Royal all week.

Grand.

For Monday the Grand has booked a special attraction of such magnitude that it is very probable that it should have been played for at least two days. It is the latest sensational film attraction starring the bewitching and tantalizing beauty, Mae Murray, late of the Ziegfeld Follies, entitled "The Bride's Awakening," a thrilling, powerful and wonderful, beautiful, six-

Chorus" make the cast and chorus one of unequalled merit. Costumes of dazzling beauty, sensational dances, sparkling music and a number of the latest novelties, go to make up an evening's entertainment which is hard to surpass.

Just laughs, jolly tunes and pretty girls, is what the management claim and this claim has never yet been disputed. From all advance reports, it will prove one of the best of the season.

The bargain matinee prices will be 25 cents for balcony seats and 50 cents for lower floor seats. The night prices will range from 50 cents to $1.50. War tax extra. Tickets will go on sale at Elvinton's Friday morning.

Royal. The Royal for the coming week presents a distinct and original novelty in tabloid musical comedy plays, bringing to Wilmington under the auspices of the Piedmont Amusement company, the Revue De-Luxe, a stellar organization of musical comedy artists, who will present miniature versions of plays never before seen in Wilmington, constructed along new and original lines.

The company opens Monday with a new and up-to-date farce comedy entitled "A Day with Cleopatra," gorgeously staged and costumed, with all the different things that would appertain to such a portrayal. The big feature of this bill is the impersonations of Anthony and Cleopatra in the hands of those "different" comedians Billy Force and Frank Penny, one convulsion of laughter right after another.

Aside from the ludicrous action of the play there is a chorus and original singing and dancing of the liveliest act production of amazing finish, a dramatic feast in lavish settings. If you were in love with a young man, if all of your thoughts revolved around him, if two days before you were to be married to him you discovered that he planned to continue his relations with another woman, exactly the same as he had prior to his marriage, what would you or any girl do? That is the condition Mae Murray faces in this production and had to make a decision.

Wid Gunning, in his usual flippant, but forceful style, in his independent review of the picture starts off thusly: "Class, a beautiful little shero, a wicked, nonchalant villain for a menace, a 'ansom' hero in the offing, and interesting action building up to a powerful climax—that's enuf aint it? Well, boys, that's the way this Mae Murray production stacks up." This picture will interest and please everyone, is the guarantee of the Grand management; and everyone is urged to see it Monday.

Bijou. Amazing nerve and ingenuity are shown in the first episode of "A Fight for Millions," Vitagraph's newest and greatest adventure serial, which will be seen in the Bijou theatre on Monday.

Two bad men, Hyde and Lawless, are just entering a life or death struggle for a girl and her fortune and the latter holds the secret of her whereabouts in a letter in his pocket. Lawless suspects Hyde but fancies himself secure in his apartment in a fashionable hotel. Hyde dare not shoot him and can not reach him otherwise to overcome him but while his rival is seated reading in his room, he bores a hole in a door directly back of him and through this prepares to introduce a slender steel fishing rod to which is attached a noose of piano wire. He then has his servant call Lawless on the telephone which rests on the table and while he is leaning over and talking, Hyde drops the noose over his head and the two men drag their victim across the room and against the door where he is choked into insensibility. The door is then forced and the conspirator robs the victim of the man of the valuable papers and leaving him bound and gagged are miles distant on a train speeding west before their crime is discovered. In this scene with tense realism, Hyde wins the first lap in their remarkable race for love and millions. Two whole chapters—the first and second, will be seen at the Bijou Monday.

Asheville, Dec. 7.—Willingness to oblige an employe cost Henry Garwood, proprietor of a restaurant in the depot section, $50 and costs in police court. Garwood testified that the negro came to him, stating that he had heard Garwood had some whiskey, and asked for a pint, stating that he needed it badly. Garwood says he at first refused to give the liquor to the negro, but later relented and let him have the pint.
