Mid- every little detail that enters into a night ended the battle. It was within match. John's jurisdiction to award a decision then to either of the wrestlers, or to call it a draw. Heracle chose to render no decision, automatically making the bout a draw.

The fact that Promoter Cates advertised this particular bout to a finish with no time limit, figured not all unless the articles of agreement between Hanson and Ellis specifically consider a professional baseball game. All ball games are to a finish, but if neither of two contesting teams have earned a lead at sundown, the umpire will halt the battle unless there is an agreement between the opposing managers to the contrary, In other words rules in any sport may be dispensed with to some extent, provided there is an agreement to this effect, otherwise the rules prevail

Promoter Cates and both Hanson and Ellis no doubt intended that Thursday's battle should go to an actual finish, or until one wrestler had won two falls, but the simple insertion of the clause "to a finish" in the contract, cannot be construed as over-ruling the laws of the game. It should have been specifically stated in the agreement that the time limit should have no effect on the match.

Heracle's inability to express himself clearly in English added to the confusion. Heracle was trying to say the match at midnight, but he unfortunately said something about blue said the wrong thing.

Hanson was returned the winner, on a fluke. There is no doubt that he was the aggressor, that he put up the better fight, and should have been given a decision on points if the referee had elected to give a decision. But in stopped the bout. He took the referee's osition over.
