

AMERICAN TARIFF AND FIRE AT CONWAY LATE ENGLAND'S COMPARED IN NIGHT BURNS HOUSE

The Tax Competing Articles and Great Britain Admits Them Duty Free

ATLANTA, Jan. 29.—The Southern congress was asked by its resolutions committee to go on record as holding that "no goods, the like of which we are now making or can make, be imported into the United States for the next ten years."

The resolutions committee of the Southern congress, which John H. McHenry, head of the congress, is chairman, was prepared at the conclusion of an address on "The Protective Tariff, and How to Touch" by James P. McHenry, formerly a representative from Minnesota, and were passed placed before the main body of the congress later.

Resolutions criticizing the federal protective board at Washington were introduced earlier in the day after the members had precipitated a lively debate on a committee of the congress sitting on the policy of President-elect Woodrow Wilson.

The protective board, which is elected by the president, is charged with the duty of determining the normal condition after the war, and Mr. Harding and Calvin Coolidge, who are president-elect, for their attitude toward the tariff.

There is no such thing as free trade among nations. The name free trade was invented to deceive and has always done so, including among its advocates. Last year the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland collected over $500,000,000 through her customs houses, or more than $10 per capita. We collected about $1 per capita, or less than one-tenth as much per capita than she, and a greater amount than was ever collected under any tariff law in the history of this nation.

Both countries admit free of duty and always have large amounts of duty on each levies duties on other goods. Neither has free trade in the sense that we have it between the states of this union.

What is the real difference between the British system and ours? She levies duties on non-competing articles and admits free of duty the competing articles. We reverse that, admitting free all non-competing articles except tea and putting duties on competing articles. For example, tea is not produced in either country and is therefore non-competing in both. Great Britain, therefore, levies a duty on tea while we admit it free of duty. Take woolen cloth. It is made in both countries and therefore imported woolen cloth would compete with home production in both countries. Therefore woolen cloth is on the free list in Great Britain and on our dutiable list. Except as to luxuries, what one country puts on the free list the other puts on the dutiable list. The proper name for the British system is non-protective tariff, and ours is protective tariff.

FINISH BOUT PLEDGED UNDER REVISED RULES Hanson and Ellis to Fight It Out Tuesday

The next match of the Hanson-Ellis thousand-dollar series for the championship of the south will be wrestled on the Academy mat Tuesday night, February 1. If Ellis wins the series will have been concluded. If Hanson is able to turn the trick, the final match will be wrestled the following week. Ringside tickets were placed on sale at Newman's cafe yesterday.

Because of the heavy purse involved, the series has engendered unusual interest, which has spread even among fans and this is to be regretted. Last week the men battled until midnight before a fall had been registered, and minutes for complications arose at that time to mar a match that made history.

Situations similar to those of the last match, however, have been taken care of in an addendum to the original contract or agreement and this has been signed by both men. It makes everything plain and provides for a fourth match, regardless of the time or date.

The match will be started on Tuesday night and the men must be wrestling by 9 o'clock. If a fall has not been gained at midnight, the match shall continue without interruption. If, at midnight, one man has already gained a fall and the second fall is being wrestled for, the match shall be stopped and the man with a fall to his credit declared the winner. If both men have gained a fall each at midnight, they shall continue wrestling until a third fall is registered.

Baptist Church People Build Sunday School Annex In Single Day

(Special to The Star) CONWAY, Jan. 29.—The home of A. W. Barrett, on Kingston avenue, was destroyed last night by fire. The family had retired for the night and shortly after 11 o'clock they were awakened by the cracking of flames in the dining room. All escaped and prompt and efficient help of neighbors enabled Mr. Barrett to save a portion of the furnishings. Both the house and furniture were protected by insurance. The garage and outbuildings were saved.

The smokestack of the local light company was blown down during the day by a stiff gale which was still blowing at the hour of the fire, hence the direction of the wind this morning. A. C. Thompson, next to Mr. Barrett's could not have been saved, and this coupled with the fact that there was a heavy downpour of rain during the day prevented other homes in that locality from burning.

Tuesday, January 26, was a big day with the Baptists of Conway. This day they set aside for the building of the Sunday school annex at the church. For the past several months the Sunday school has been growing to such an extent that all the departments have been overcrowded. Some time ago it was decided to erect a wooden building and the plan of erecting this building in one day was enthusiastically entered into, and all members of the Sunday school were invited to be present Tuesday morning with such tools as they were able to use. Bright and early the workmen were in abundance, and the work was begun. At noon the ladies of the church arrived with a feast for the workmen, most of whom distinguished themselves at the table as they ate and drank with hearty enjoyment. Supper was served the faithful few who remained to see the job finished, and then at 7:30 o'clock, the regular hour for prayer meeting, lights were turned on and the task was done; service was held and a large audience was present.

The annex has a seating capacity of approximately 300 and contains three large class rooms. Edith Cushman of Greenville, S. C., is visiting his brother, Harry G. Cushman. Charley and Harry Buckley, who have been spending the past several months in Florida, have returned to Conway. John D. Wedaman spent last weekend with friends at Marion. Mr. and Mrs. Z. D. Anderson, of Georgetown, are visiting relatives in the city.

Plans are being made for the organization of a troop of boy scouts. Rev. J. C. Atkinson is in charge of this movement. Charles A. Creech, who has been visiting Walter A. Stillely, Jr. left Monday for his home at Goldsboro, N. C. Miss Bernice Martin, who has been visiting Mrs. Paul Quattlebaum, has returned to her home at Marion. W. A. Stillely, Jr., Charles A. Creech, Paul Little, J. S. Beverly, Joe McMillan and Edward Burroughs returned the first of the week, after spending several days on the Santee, near Georgetown, duck hunting. The trip was made on the Veneer Manufacturing company's boat, "The Jeanette."

Chief Gilmore Smith, of the Conway police force, Postmaster Charles P. Scarborough, Burgess King and H. N. Sessions spent several days in Columbia last week attending the trial of J. C. Calhoun, the negro, who stole from the Conway postoffice. Robert E. Scarborough, Van Horton, D. V. Richardson, V. D. Johnson, J. A. McDermott, A. C. Thompson and a number of others from Conway and other points in the county spent Thursday and Friday in Columbia attending the "free range" hearing before the senate committee.

CHURCH CLUB TO HOLD SERVICES DURING LENT Special Down Town Meetings for Men 10 Days

An innovation in Wilmington, but an old custom in larger cities, during Lent this year, will be a special downtown meeting for men, under the auspices of the Men's Church club of the Episcopal church, from March 14 to March 25, inclusive, the meetings to be held at the Victoria theatre daily, from 1:05 to 1:30 o'clock.

The Men's Church club is looking forward with interest to the series of meetings and it is said that if it proves a success, which is confidently expected, the club hereafter will have a more elaborate program each Lenten season, and will bring to the city speakers of national reputation.

GERMAN PROSPERITY ONLY A GLITTER SAYS PUBLICIST (Continued from Page One) in France by Jules Guesde la Fargue and Marx's grandson, Jean Longuet, France rejects the best thing we could give her, namely, the labor. A million well disciplined German workmen with building materials and engineers' tools would soon reconstruct the ruined towns and villages and mines and factories. If these men were used not in the form of colonization, our municipal finances would be relieved, as would our unemployment burdens. Thus would be increased our paying capacity.

Germany's chief faults are: (1) She gives a false impression of her condition by a too luxurious and at present inappropriate political economy and by importing great quantities of luxuries. These make distress seem hypocritical to the allies, though they would be dissatisfied if Germany did not buy their wines, champagnes, liquors, cloth, silks, laces, perfumery, soap, tea, cocoa, dresses and hats. (2) Instead of making positive suggestions which, through their justness would meet the approval of all impartial people, she tries to prove by diplomatic notes the impossibility of the conditions imposed. (3) Last but not least the government shows repeatedly the old unchanged German spirit in its enthusiasm for the Hohenzollerns, by glorifying the lies of trickery of von Bethmann-Hollweg, by denying Germany's guilt for the beginning of the war and by defending the criminals of the war. It is the return of this Germany to strength that her neighbors fear and which makes them refuse to relinquish the occupied territory.

This occupation still takes the major part of what Germany is able to pay, if more bank notes are printed the mark will sink still lower, and not only Germany's creditors but her customers will suffer. The biggest cause of Germany's misery today is still within the German people. Every month shows an increase, both north and south, of the wave of monarchist and nationalist sentiment, to which the Prussian elections in February will bring a great triumph, unless an unmistakable warning from the outside assures equal rights in the world and the League of Nations and speedy liberation from the costly and hateful occupation of the foreigner to a really democratic and honestly republican Germany.

AMERICA ALONE CAN MAKE TREATY WORK (Continued from Page One) and arbitrary political situation, where in each nation foregoes her own salvation to spite her neighbor. Europe Basically Sound It augurs well for Europe's basic soundness that a dire catastrophe has thus far been averted, despite America's silence and aloofness. Both democracy and its necessary concomitant, economic restoration, are wandering leaderless on account of America's absence. This does not necessarily argue for a ratification of the Versailles treaty, though if the United States were determined on a program of world rehabilitation, perhaps the easiest way would be to ratify the treaty and then call the nations in conference to rewrite it. This step might easily be possible, as friends of the treaty here point out, because of the certainty that support should be forthcoming from Scandinavian and neutral countries generally. These plainly showed at Geneva that they desire to take control of the world's destinies out of the hands of the supreme allied council and hand it to an organization embracing all nations. America, it is said, could well attempt to encourage such a plan. The supreme allied council, in a long period of experiment, has not shown any distinctive competence for ruling human destinies as would warrant an indefinite continuance of its power.

In his researches at the Pasteur Institute in Paris Professor Delezenne has discovered that zinc is an essential and permanent constituent of the human body. There are 3,003 miles of water mains in New York. This is more than enough for a pipe line from New York to San Francisco. Even fertilizers can't overcome the handicap of poor seed bed and poor seed.
