FOUR

THE MORNING STAR, WILMINGTON, N. C., TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1921.

The Morning Star

THE OLDEST DAILY IN NORTH CAROLINA" Published Every Morning in the Year by The WIL-MINGTON STAR COMPANY, Inc., 109 Chestnut Street, Wilmington, North Carolina

 Entered at the Second Class	he Postofice Matter.	at	Wilmington,	N.	C.
		-

	Telephonest
Editorial	Office	61
Business	Office

SUBSCRIPTION RATES BY CARRIER

One Year .	 	 		• •				•	• •	•	•		•	٠	••	•	$7.0
Die an Md a math la m											1.1.1	10.00	1.000	1.24	4.74	2.00
one Month	 	 			 	 		•					٠	•.	• •

SUBSCRIPTION RATES BY MA
Postage Prepaid Daily only	Daily and Sunday
Dne Year	$7.00
Three Months 1.25 One Month	.60

Subscriptions Not Accepted for Sunday Only Edition

MEMBER OF ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Associated Press is exclusively entitled to the use for publication of all news credited to it or not otherwise credited in this paper and also the local news published herein. All rights of re-publication of special dispatches herein are also reserved.

FOREIGN ADVERTISING OFFICES Candler Building, J. B. KEOUGH Atlanta: Chicago Boston w York 21 Devonshire Peoples' Gas Bldg. 225 Fifth Ave. BRYANT, GRIFFITH & BRUNSON.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1921.

A Treat in Store

President Wilson has entered the preliminary stages of arrangements for presenting the world with a history of the Peace Conference. Former Secretary Lansing has published a book which, out of deference to the President or to the Presidency, will not be released by the publishers until March 5th, the day after Mr. Wilson leaves the White House. Secretary Daniels intimated in his recent address at the Naval Academy that he intended to brush up on his dictation or typewriting or goose-quilling, and added that he would not be deterred by any dearth of subject matter. It is entirely probable that various gentlemen, who have heretofore felt the restraint imposed by public office, will "take pen in hand" before the incoming administration has passed beyond the seatwarming stage.

The President, we are led to believe, has in contemplation a comprehensive account of the conference at Versailles. There will be a feeling of dis-

General Will Hays

The generally prevalent belief that Will Hays will become Postmaster General in the Harding cabinet gains new force and interest by the announcement that he has been chosen to direct the reconstruction of the Republican party in the South. Mr. Hays may in time be known as Mr. Harding's Hitchcock. The vast power which Mr. Hitchcock developed as a Republican machine man was a natural product of the hold which he took upon the Southern wing of the G. O. P. during his term as Postmaster General. The office is one which, though not to the extent of former days, lends itself with peculiar readiness to political uses. Through the skillful handling of his chances, main and small, Mr. Hitchcock made the office yield a measure of political strength not often exceeded by a cabinet member.

Will Hays is not essentially of the Hitchcock type, but this does not mean that he would fail to build as well as the latter built upon the advantages of the Postmaster Generalship. He has demonstrated his superior qualifications as a swivel chair general in practical politics. It is probably true that he knows more little tricks pertinent to political organization on a large scale than any other man now active in his party. He is a great distributor of oil for troubled waters, but his chief source of strength lies in his ability to apply a multitude of relatively minor devices to the task of building up an effective political organization. We sometimes suspect that Mr. Hays learned much from the German foreign office. In any case, he is the foremost American propagandist, and if he should fail to inject some life into the Republican party of the South, there would be no further basis for hope.

Faith in the Beach

It is most gratifying to catch the strong note of optimism which pervades the expressions of persons who have a substantial interest in the safety and permanence of Wrightsville Beach. We are publishing elsewhere in this issue several brief statements on the condition of the Beach following the recent tidal attack, with individual forecasts of the future at this cherished bathing resort.

The first impressions gained by casual visitors at the Beach since the storm have naturally been more discouraging than those in which the present injury is considered in its proper relation to the history of the Beach as a summer resort. The men whose views are given in The Star today are clearly not considering the incident as detached or isolated; they are remembering what has happened before. They are unwilling, in the light of long experience, to subscribe to the belief that the damage which has been done is irreparable. Some of them are convinced that nature, unaided, will carry on the work of restoration effectively. We gather that none of them would be averse to an arrangement for a scientific survey of the Beach situation, with a view to obtaining the best obtainable advice. The matter is one that the people of Wilmington can not afford to neglect. If it should be decided that the natural process of rebuilding may need the assistance of an engineering device, the matter of expense ought not to be permitted to prevent the experiment. We are confident that the suggestion to this effect, credited to several of the gentlemen interviewed in this issue, will be given immediately favorable attention.

the public has not become indifferent to the motor car and is still able to make reasonable investment in it. The conviction was re-inforced by the remarkable out-turn for the Cleveland show.

Stimulated by the display of interest in these and other motor car exhibitions of the season and responding to the urge of a healthy crop of advance orders for the spring, the automobile industry is rapidly coming back to life. There is definite promise now that one of the country's chief sources of unemployment and, consequently, of depression, will quickly be eliminated. Throughout the automobile world, there are unmistakable signs of the re-awakening. The announcement of Ford's re-opening on a fifty per cent is said to have been a generous contributor to the revival of confidence in the motor trade generally. Other well known manufacturing companies have announced a steady increase in operation. Upwards of thirty thousand workers have just returned to their posts in Detroit. The Hudson, Cadillac, Standard, Fisher, Briggs and other companies have returned to a basis of operation which provides for about fifty per cent of their recent employes.

The industry is "looking up." One of the earliest to feel the full force of the slump in the early winter, it now gives promise of being a leader in the return to what a well known gentleman has described as "normalcy."

Contemporary Views

FINE OFFICIAL STEPS OUT

Insurance Field: There has just passed out of the public service a man who should not be permitted to go without deserved remark. That is James R. Young, for twenty-one years Commissioner of Insurance for North Carolina, who, on January 1, retired to private life to build his fortunes which many honest and conscientious public servants find it necessary to do upon the usual rewards that come to their service. There are plenty of honest men retiring from public service every year and we are not referring to Mr. Young as a rara avis in honesty. He would resent that as many others would have a right to; but he happens to have occupied a peculiar relative position and exercised a peculiar influence that reacts to his peculiar credit. He was an excellent insurance Commissioner for North Carolina, which is not an important state in the volume of insurance produced, but he was also an excellent member of that institute of insurance practice known as the National Convention of Insurance Commissioners. He has been a conservative, but not a reactionary, and has wielded a most wholesome influence upon that body. He has checked many a radical move and his work has been constructive and careful in the highest degree. For this reason his retirement

Daily Health Talks By William Brady, M. D.

STILL MORE AUTODETOXICATION

Physiologists and pathologists who have nothing to sell find little if any cases of delayed bowel action or cona condition as autointoxication.

If any deleterious effects can be ment, which had little interest left for ascribed to retention within the body the business of the Entente, has broken and blood of the waste products of the contract which bound it. It is a normal metabolism of life processes, or great disappointment for those who to the formation of abnormal products had put their trust in Mr. Harding. through disturbed functions, and physiologists and pathologists have every reason to believe that such poisoning shown here very plainly. Mr. James does occur as a feature of a great | M. Beck already pointed to this fact in many disease conditions, the individual his book, 'The Passing of the New obsessed with the autointoxication Freedom." He imagines a situation in idea should realize, for the sake of his own peace of mind and sanity, that this is seldom if ever due to a costive or constipated habit. One who eats too much may or may sion which he was called upon to ful-not be costive, may or may not depend upon physic to maintain the function of regular bowel action, but is pretty sure to be autointoxicated. One who eats too much can never be uncertain about it; all he need do is step on a scales and find out whether he is overweight. If such a one were a horse his owner would know at once why the animal was out of condition, but being a human being he keeps on overfeeding (or neglecting daily exercise, which has the same effect) and takes Hoodwink's Laudable Liver Pills. Any real or potential poison in the nature of retained waste products (retained. I mean, in the blood or tissues, and of course not in the bowels) must be eliminated from the blood and tissues through the various excretory organs (lungs, skin, kidneys, liver and only in a limited extent in the bowel) or rendered innocuous by combustion or oxidation within the blood and tissues. This latter fate is favored by (1) temporate eating and (2) sufficient general exercise daily. Exercise inthe tissues in disposing of real or potential poisons. Exercise is perhaps who will be made responsible.' the best remedy we have for actual which Senator Lodge, Senator Hitchautointoxication, over and above its cock, ex-President Taft and Hughes casual regulating action on the bowels are called to Paris, and Wilson decides The late Metchnikoff was on the tract in his search for a preventive or questions of universal interest. * remedy for autointoxication. His fermented skimmed milk-practically buttermilk-is a wholesome beverage, but one of the evil-doers of humanity. In autointoxication neither begins nor James Beck's book he resembles Shakeends in the intestinal tract.

Persons who really are suffering He is one of those inconsistent from retained or unoxidized wastes (re- 'poseurs' who deceives others in deceivtained in the blood and tissues, not in ing himself. His personality combines the bowels) can select no better means the clergyman and the pedagogue, and of autodetoxication than oxygen in the his political duplicity is evident." minimum dose of two miles three times The writer goes on to describe

European News and Views

A French Appraisal of Wilsonism's Cost

The withdrawal of the United States | Versailles which is continually from the Conference of Ambassadors viding new means and opportunity agitation to the Radicals of the waste matter or poisonous material of another example of the strained rela- and the Right. Economic distress fall of the exchange, want of coal The employment and heavy taxes all writer says:

vide rich food for Communist br "The United States has withdrawn ganda, while the nationalists The Entente always demands force can alone save us; to a The fact is that the American govern-moreover, a duty of imperial hono "The negotiations at Spa unfor nately did not better the situation; t rather made it worse in submit once again the German Government compulsion. It is only to be that the Temps' point of view wil "The terrible frivolity of those who adopted by the Entente and that negotiated the Treaty of Versailles is decisions of the Brussels Confere will be penetrated with the same spi "It is true France can contri largely to the development of a real which M. Clemenceau and Lloyd George democratic republic in Germany. informed by the American agents, not by repeating incessantly that G make known to President Wilson their many will not pay and will not e out her obligations, as Viviani has h uneasiness on the subject of the mis-done at Geneva. "Such declarations show a want knowledge of the real situation. W mocracy. In this way it is preparing new dangers for the tranquility of Ge

In an interview with the Lon-

Evening Standard, Sir Josiah Stam

the eminent authority on taxation, an

America, Sir Josiah Stamp

would be in a far better position loans, because the man who takes sentimental considerations than every conceivable way," he adds.

debtors will say, for instance, that the bore the brunt of the war." Allu was made to one country in partie

which, though decidedly prosper now, was said to be "selfishly" put

'We ourselves shall be 'got at' a bad debt is far less_susceptible riginal creditor.

forward this plea.

ourselves for the final recovery (

'We should be deceiving the great interests in our keeping,' said M. Clem- the Temps creates a belief in the d enceau, 'if we should continue to ig- ger of a military and monarchist nore that, according to the Constitution action, it renders the work of ours of your country, no treaty concluded ernment still more difficult, it con dicts itself and makes that politi by you has any moral and legal sigmistake which it is trying to fu nificance without the consent of twoagainst in preventing a political, thirds of the Senate.' lution in the sense of a moderate d

"Full of conceit, Wilson declares that he may be relied upon completely. "The senate,' he says, 'is only putty in my hands.' But Mr. Lloyd George insists many and Europe." and demands that representatives of the Senate be called to Paris, which makes Mr. Wilson angry, and he threatens to leave France, but M. Clemenceau plifies his proposal for "the form tells him very firmly that if he leaves Paris because he was asked very nat- cancellation of our American debt a pro rata allotment from each of ural questions as to the extent of his power, he would suffer more than any 'Allies' debts" to us. one else, that he would fall at once from his pedestal. Mr. Wilson's vanity is hurt and hesitates when M. Clemenceau attacks once more, saying, 'If we bow down to your imperious exicreases the absorption of oxygen in the gencies and afterward America gives body tissues and therefore greatly aids you the lie and the peace of the world is in question, it is you, and you alone After to be bound by the doctrine of Monroe right track but perhaps in the wrong and in the future only interfere in The writer continues: "The 'apostle Wilson will certainly be considered as America's Moral Obligation Enlarging upon his experience American financial opinion. Sir Jo says, "I did not meet with a sing banker in the New England statesspeare's Malvoglio in 'Twelfth Night may be different in the Middle West who was, not in favor of a settle along the lines I have suggested.

"They all realize the moral obl tion of America to share the good se curity for their loans, which they son as a vain and unpleasant moral- tained as the result of coming late in ist, who envelopes his artificial the war, with those who were in fr thoughts in a most irritating and ob- the first, and had to issue loans of The German Ambassador doubtful security. scure style. "The New England bankers I foun Bernstorff spoke of him as an 'egocento be full of admiration for our of duct of our finance, full of admiration for our handling of the recent Angle French loan." Alluding to the recent America move to secure large mining and i concessions in Siberia, Sir Josiah Star continues, "We must recognize th America is in a far better position the time supposed to be observing strict ourselves to exploit the wealth of Rus evidence that a resorption of harmful is taken by the Paris Eclair as only any kind occurs from the intestine in tions produced by "Wilsonism." stipation. In that sense, then, I am from the Ambassador's Conference and entirely serious when I say that no it is impossible to persuade us that Gerone has yet proved that there is such many is wrong in rejoicing over it.

appointment over the intimation that his product will be in no sense autobiographical in form. His preference, it is explained, "has always been toward history as a form of literary expression." Doubtless, the interest of the public would have been quickened more perceptibly by a forecast of something resembling a hide-ripping piece, with particular attention to certain gentlemen who have come into collision, so to speak, with the President in comparatively recent months. There is still a strong probability that the literary Executive will, at least by artistically indirect touches, pay his respects to some well known American statesmen. But, whether he does or not, we may confidently look forward to a real contribution to world history in his literary offering.

In Ray Stannard Baker, the President has chosen a capable assistant. Mr. Baker was attached to the American commission at Versailles. He is a thorough workman in literary matters. and his assistance as keeper and assembler of the records desired by Mr. Wilson for his book (or books) will be of great value.

The President, it is hardly necessary to state, will ask no aid in the purely literary performance of the task. One or two critics have found occasion to attack the Wilson style, but his bitterest foes have usually conceded his mastery of thelanguage we use. His profound knowledge of history, his peculiarly intimate understanding of the things that were done and said at the Peace Conference, his skill as a writer on historical themes -these give assurance to the public of a production that will instruct and entertain far beyond the measure ordinarily achieved by the books we pronounce good.

Mr. Hurley's Suggestion

. * *

Having heard a great deal about the overemphasis given by minor workers to the unproductive distractions of play, joy-riding and sandraising, we may not find it inappropriate to attend for the moment to another aspect of the picture as presented by Mr. Edward Hurley, former chairman of the Shipping Board. Mr. Hurley comes forward with the suggestion that one cause of the fairly acute suffering which business has felt may be found in the large waste of time on executive conferences, national gatherings and golf excursions. In short, our leaders and organizers have been too busy playing to devote the proper attention to work and the workers. He is apprehensive of the seemingly prevalent belief that a paper organization is sufficient; that its functioning is not dependent upon the supervision formerly given by executive chiefs.

It is interesting, in this connection, to note the ultimatum which is said to have been issued recently by certain New York bankers: that is, that "unless more time is devoted to personal supervision of business, credit accommodations will be cancelled."

Generally speaking, we may safely assume that the men who have risen to positions of authority in the business world rose on individual merit. They have been elevated to command because they displayed the qualities which are ordinarily taken to fit men for such posts. It follows quite obviously, then, that any widespread dereliction on their part must be reflected by a decided deterioration in our business organization. Their direction and encouragement are essential to the maintenance of the business machine. They must relegate pointless conferences and excessive golfing toa more logical position in their scheme of life. We have never needed their personal efforts more.

A Banking Basis for Optimism

Our banking system is sounder and stronger today than it has been for many months. Business, at first over-exhilarated and then unduly depressed, has recovered its normal state of mind. The significance of this fact is apparent to us all, and we are warranted in looking to the future with a feeling of conservative optimism, with renewed courage and restored confidence, which will make easier our task of overcoming the problems which are ahead of us.

W. P. G. Harding, who, as Governor of the Federal Reserve Board, has an intimate knowledge of the banking situation of the entire world, is not a man given to loose thinking or careless statements. Hence his optimism is particularly significant at a time when many people, less attuned to financial tremors, are fearful of continued depression. Many of these were among the men who, in 1919-20, admitted that though readjustment must come, they themselves would escape it.

During that period of expansion, when speculation was rife, some banks may not have done everything possible to check the demands for bank accommodations; they have since then redeemed themselves. Early in 1919, says Mr. Harding, the Federal Reserve Board urged corrective measures to bring about liquidation, but found that advances in discount rates did not help materially. The banks were then urged to give preference to loans for essential purposes, and, aside from the advance to agriculture, a marked reduction in federal loans was brought about. The extent to which the banks have held their own is thus expressed by the Governor:

I believe it is now quite generally conceded that our present banking system, which has been put to the severest tests during the last few years, has met them all. It has demonstrated its ability to extend credit in volume sufficient to meet the requirements of the country in time of war and during the last year has shown its ability to hold expansion in check and ward off any danger of a money panic.

No matter how strong our banking system might be, it would be of little stimulative value if pessimism should be as deep as optimism was high. a year ago. Mr. Harding, however, is convinced that this condition will not prevail. With evidence that the wool, cotton, and wheat industries are improving, his attitude is one of security, as he says:

A hopeful factor in the present situation, as I see it, is that we have returned to a normal state of mind. Extravagant tendencies have been checked, and the importance of the individual living within his means has been brought home to us. At the same time the wave of profound pessimism has passed by. The main thing for us to do now is to retain a normal state of mind and be safe, sound and calm in our judgments.

will be a distinct loss to all branches of the business to be felt in all the states.

The effect of his labors in his own state of North Carolina are well worth observing for the benefit of other Southern states. Under his persuasion and guidance and through the force of his character the "North State" has enacted wise laws. There is not a restrictive insurance law in North Carolina. Instead of fighting insurance companies he has fought foolish laws.

North Carolina's condition as to insurance suggests a deadly parallel with Mississippi where general business is again plunged into trouble because of obsolete and barbarous laws.

This is a mere sidelight but it illuminates concretely by sharp comparison the influences of such an official as James R. Young upon the state he served so wisely and so well. He has highly earned and will carry with him into retirement the great respect, esteem and honor of all who have come into contact with him during his long labors.

A WORTH WHILE MOVEMENT

Charlotte News: The Young Women's Christian Association has designated February 1 as a day when all the cafeterias of the association will observe "Invisible Guest Day" and turn over all gross cash receipts of the noon meal to the European Relief Committee. There are over 250 such cafeterias in the county and many more lunch rooms and in one of these cafeterias alone, one of eight in New York City, the noon-day patrons number on an average of 2,344, so it can be seen what the possibilities are of this plan.

And it seems to us that in addition to being a practical plan by which the starving millions in Europe may be relieved, this ought to be the suggestion of a widespread movement among the families of this country to observe some such sort of a day also when a part of the cost of the daily meal might be shared with the little children abroad who are perishing for even the crumbs that are falling from our tables. The children in the households this community, if they could be impressed with the urgency of the need yonder and with the merits of this charity, would take great pride, the most of them, in denying themselves some of the good things to which they are accustomed and sharing them with the little tots in famine-stricken countries overseas. The Y. W. C. A. has started a very worthy movement. It deserves to be widely imitated.

FOLLOWING WRONG LEADERS

Raleigh News and Observer: The Charlotte Observer accurately sees in the Norlina affair the outgrowth of bad leadership among the negroes. It says: "Out of a trivial circumstance at a local store there sprung up a bit of bad feeling among a portion of the negro population and this feeling was fanned by a couple of negroes with outlaw tendencies.'

The difference between the outstanding types of negroes is well illustrated by popular estimates of William Bullock and Matthew and Plummer Bullock, sons of William. William is described as an inoffensive, hard-working man. His boys, having come under the influence of that variety of negro leadership which tries to inflame the negro with hatred for the white man, were cordially disliked by the whites because of their insolence and presumption.

The negro race, for its own good, needs more safe, wise leaders. It has some such leaders, but not nearly enough. The white people can help by giving encouragement to negro leaders who counsel peaceful ways and lives on the part of their fellows and by doing everything possible to defeat the efforts and teachings of those who teach the negroes to endeavor to secure mass action for revenge when one of their number suffers a wrong, real or fancied.

a day on the hoof.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS Sesame

The finest thing I have ever used for dryness or harshness of the skin tric,' which seemed to be a good deand scalp was a sesame oil formula scription of him. M. Clemenceau spoke you printed. I had it prepared by my of him one day in anger as being prodruggist several times, but now he has German, and it is said that in 1916, lost the formula. I am sure it would when the doors of the White House please many readers if you will be were often closed to French and Enggood enough to reprint that formula. lish ambassadors, Bernstorff found admission, although Wilson was at the (Mrs. S. E. O.) ANSWER: Five grains of powdered benzoin is to be placed in each ounce neutrality. It appears even that ne of sesame oil (also known as teel oil was discussing a plan of intervention and benne oil), and digested over a which would have induced the sacriwater bath for three hours. Then add fices of the Allies to nothing by arthree drops of absolute alcohol to each ranging a peace by compromise through ounce and filter. A few drops may be the mediation of America. applied daily to skin or scalp. In or-"Happily the ferocity of Germany, der to confound the fellow who seems concludes the writer, 'put a stop to to take such fiendish delight in misthis. When the Imperial Government printing my formulas, I'll repeat the rejected his offer of mediation and started the submarine warfare, Wilquantities: Powdered benzoin, 20 grains; oil of son's vanity was wounded, and he besesame, 4 ounces; absolute alcohol. 12 came their enemy. Although he declared in 1914 that it was not the busidrops. ness of America to examine the causes

Underwear

I have heard several people say that of the war, in 1917 he declared that porous knit underwear should be worn the cause of the Allies was one with in the winter, and that woolen and silk the cause of justice and democracy in are not good. I am a high school boy. the world. But after Wilhelm was re-What kind of underwear do you advise moved from the scene of action he did for me? (H. B. W.) all in his power to save Germany. It

ANSWER: Very light weight porous was he who poisoned the atmosphere knitted wool or wool and sllk underof the Entente, and caused France to wear. By porous knitted wear I mean be accused of Imperialism. the ordinary machine knitted material "Indeed," he says, "no one can blame of today, no particular brand, and I us for the present painful situation af mean to advise against wearing the ter such a glorious victory. It is sim old-time tightly woven "flannels." The ply Wilsonism which is costing us very reason for preferring wool or wool and silk is that wool and silk are slow heat conductors, whereas cotton and linen are fast conductors. With a thin layer of porous wool or wool and silk next to the skin you are protected against sudden demands on the vasomotor ner- not encouraging moderate republicans vous mechanism which controls dis-Germany? semi-official task of this generation is to all The tribution of blood. Thus when you Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung says: plunge from the street, at say 24 de-"The Paris Temps, on the occasion grees F, into the schoolroom or other of the last debate in the French Chaminside air tank, at say 70 degrees F., ber, made many comments worthy of voiced comparisons of fighting strengt and vice versa, many times a day, the remark:

wool or wool and silk, being a slow "Fearing the possibility of a miliheat conductor, makes the change less tary or communist dictatorship, the disappearance of the German floet strenuous; cotton or linen would rath-Temps declares that it would be to world's naval position is changed. er add to the severity of the change the interest of France to see a really that today civilization is not threat I do not maintain that a high school firm democratic republic established in ed by any maritime power. lad necessarily needs any armor, but if Germany, and that France might con-"The view of the League is the tribute to it.

he is to wear underwear it should be very light weight wool or wool and "In saying this the Temps is only proposing a conference between silk, not cotton or linen in winter. Try epeating what has so often been said, those powers whose geographical, wearing a wet cotton or linen bathing on the German side, that the attitude sitions impose upon them the gua suit on a cool windy day, and then a of the Entente, which threatens conianship of the seas, and to deci wet wolen suit, and you will underinually the political and economic ex- what way this joint guardianship m stand the difference.

WOMAN MEDICAL LECTURER IS COMPLETELY EXONERATED

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 31 .- Dr. Mar garet Hoskins, a member of the faculty of the Medical College of Virginia, was exonerated by the executive committee of the board of visitors for remarks she made to students in regard to intermarriage of races. The decision was rendered in the form of a resolution unanimously adopted by the committee and representatives from the four medical classes of the college.

Testimony of the students present when the remarks were made brought out the fact that the discussion regarding inter-marriage did not take place while the class was in session and did not form part of any lecture delivered by the doctor. The students' testimony brought out the fact that Dr. Hoskins in a conversation with several of them had made remarks regarding the inter-marriage of races. The committee in addition to the sia and Siberia "We must also recognize that transfer to America of Russia's h debtedness to us would place in hands a stick to beat us. But we do to on expecting to exploit t not wealth of the world with our finance n their present condition." He adds, with regard to his alter tive scheme-the assignment to An ica of a European debt of larger inal amount than our present de America-that he had good reason believing that our Government willing to exchange the whole of loans to our Allies, 1731 millions, our debt to America, 867 millions.

He concludes that now is the favo able time for making overtures America on these lines. She has t covered from the heat of the president tial conflict, and is ready to take calm view of her obligations

Seas Safe for Civilization vilization is no longer threater by any maritime power, in the opini of the Navy, official organ of the Br ish Navy League, and hence the peo have become opposed to armaments

GERMAN DEMOCRACY AND THE "It is not, perhaps, greatly influ on that point by the existence League of Nations, but it is influ by the very general feeling that the healing of past wounds, not the fliction of fresh ones; that the freth of international jealousies by is a disservice to humanity. "The League points out that with!

present time is specially favorable stence of Germany, can only weaken be carried out."

"The League urges that the invit Republican government and tions to this proposed conferen strengthen the two extreme parties. "Such is indeed the political evolu- should come from Britain and Ame tion in Germany since the Treaty of jointly."

ALLIES Have the Allies made a mistake

Mr. Harding seems to be having a corking good time down in Florida playing golf, a game in paramount importance.

The Automotive Revival

The impressive attendance attracted by the New York Automobile Show, with every indication which the task of getting out of a hole isn't of of the keenest popular interest in models and prices, demonstrated to the manufacturers that

Raleigh News and Observer: Dann is setting a good example in fostering poultry raising. Farmers who "planted" some poultry last year are finding that they are in better shape to stand losses on cotton and tobacco. It is an interesting fact that a number of Californians are to come to North Carolina to engage in poultry farming. They have heard of the fine climate in this State, of the plentiful markets of the East and they have made up their minds to cross the country to take up the work here. If these men can come so far to engage in poultry farming it would seem that there might well be more poultry farming by men already here, testimony of the students had before it a letter from Dr. Hoskins in which she stated she had no intention of advocating inter-marriage of the races and that she regretted the incident.

NEW COAST-TO-COAST LINE SEATTLE, Wash., Jan. 31.-Announcement here today of the inauguration of another coast - to - coast steamship service with the sailing from New York on February 1, of the steamship C. H. Livingstone, of the United States Transport company of New York and Philadelphia, bringing the number of intercoastal services to this port via the Panama canal to 10. The new company recently acquir_ ed six vessels from the U. S. shipping board.

Large and growing resources Ample capital and surplus Extreme willingness to serve Spirit of personal contact with its patrons Friendly banking atmosphere Modern and absolutely safe fireproof building.

Leadership in furthering community interests.

4 Per Cent Interest, Compounded Quarterly Allowed on Deposits