THE OPEN ROAD

Out to the joy of the open road
Soon shall my feet be gone
Led by the dreams of the heart of youth
Over the slopes of dawn
Desert and valley and heights of snow
Plains where the rivers run
Jungles and steppes of the frozen north
Islands that take the sun
Nautch girls that dance in the silent noon
Sphinx of the world-old Nile
Caravans crossing the trackless waste
Pyramids pile on pile—
Italy, Greece and the Caucasus
Persia and Hindustan
I shall see them all with the heart of the boy
Alive in the heart of the man
Glad with the love of the open road
Free-hearted to take my way
Friends and men and a life of change
Shall welcome me day by day
Midnights shall pass with their starry deeps
Noons shall have come and gone
While still from the gray of the skies before
Breaks the orient rose of dawn

"Salem Day" To Be Observed

From the Winston-Salem Sentinel: February 8 is known to every girl of Salem college and academy as "Salem day," for that day marks the anniversary of the granting of the charter for the establishment of a girls' school at this place. On Thursday afternoon of next week before the alumnae only old girls and teachers will be permitted to attend in the college library, there will pass the shades of the Salem girl of the past and the Salem girl of the future.

A great deal of interest and energy is being expended in the getting together of the costumes to be worn on this occasion for they will be real gowns worn by the girls of the long ago and not just ones fashioned for this event, according to some old photograph or some fashion book of years ago. Many attic trunks in both Winston and Salem are daily opening and giving forth their treasures of silk, satins, calico, and buckram to be worn on this date and many will be envious of those who attended Salem for the little bits of history and prophecy that will be divulged on that date will be both fascinating and memorable.

Miss Kate Stuart was a visitor in the city on Tuesday.

An informal reception complimentary to the "Hoop La" cast will be held tonight at the American Legion but from 9 to 12 o'clock.

Friends of Mrs. T. O. Bunting will regret to learn that she has been sick for several days and is still confined to her room.
