

HOME PROPOSED AS M'CLURE MEMORIAL

Would Dedicate Hospital Building to Memory of Beloved Wilmington Pastor

The Alexander D. McClure Nurses Home. That will be the name of the proposed home for nurses that the public will be asked to erect, through contributions, at the James Walker Memorial hospital. The one building will be a memorial to a man who was greatly beloved in Wilmington and also an institution that will properly house the nurses of the institution and release rooms in the main building for the use of patients.

Such a building as is proposed will cost approximately $70,000 and it is hoped to raise that sum in the $100,000 campaign that a group of citizens will launch for the James Walker Memorial hospital on Tuesday, February 15. The remaining $30,000 is needed to wipe out a present indebtedness incurred for operating expenses and in order to care for charity patients.

With these two big objects, the citizens backing the campaign believe that success is assured, that the public of Wilmington must be grateful for the work being done by the James Walker Memorial hospital and must realize that it cannot meet the demands upon it unless it has adequate facilities.

Leave First Meeting More Enthusiastic Than Ever

DEATH OF MRS. RHODES IN WILSON LAST WEEK

Remarkable Woman With Remarkable Family Connections Passes Away

The death last week of Mrs. Martha Louisa Battle Rhodes at her home in Wilson marked the passing of the last living child of the Rev. Amos Johnston Battle, distinguished North Carolina divine and philanthropist, who was active in raising funds and securing the charter for the founding of Wake Forest college.

Mrs. Rhodes, who died in her 84th year, was connected with many prominent North Carolinians through both her paternal and maternal families. Her grandfather, Joel Battle, was one of the first students to enter the University of North Carolina. He matriculated in 1798. He built one of the first cotton factories in North Carolina, in 1820.

Among Mrs. Rhodes' sons and uncles were William H. Battle, justice of the supreme court of North Carolina; Dorsey Battle, a planter of Edgecombe county; Joel Battle, a physician at old Everettsville in Wayne county; Mrs. Catherine Lewis, mother of the late Dr. Richard H. Lewis of Kinston; Mrs. Susan McKee, mother of Dr. James McKee, of Raleigh; and Mrs. Laura Battle Phillips, who died last October at Chapel Hill in her 95th year. Dr. Kemp Plummer Battle, former state treasurer and for many years president of the University of North Carolina, was a first cousin of Mrs. Rhodes.

Her brothers and sisters were Cullen Battle and Jesse Battle, millionaire manufacturing chemists of St. Louis, Mo.; Mrs. Annie Battle Harrell, wife of Dr. Wm. B. Harrell, who composed the words and music for the famous state song, "The Carolinian"; Mrs. Katie Battle Foy, wife of Dr. Joseph H. Foy, former school teacher of Josephus Daniels, secretary of the navy; and Mrs. Caroline Bullock, wife of W. J. Bullock of Edgecombe county.

gives to the Church of the Covenant one of the most complete church plants in the entire south.

In no feature of the building is the completeness of all detail shown more clearly than in the interior furnishings and arrangements which have been provided. The entire basement of the building is arranged so that it can be used for the social entertainment of the people of the church and the community, being divided into four club rooms, one of which will be for the women, one for the girls, one for the men and one for the boys, with kitchenette, storage pantry and all accessories. Each of these rooms will be furnished in keeping with the purpose for which it is intended to be used and is provided with red tile floors.

There will be rolling partitions dividing the club rooms, which will make it possible to convert the club rooms into assembly rooms when the occasion is large enough to demand it.

NEW HANOVER SUNDAY SCHOOLS' CONVENTION TO OPEN HERE TODAY

State Superintendent Sims and Prof. Honline of Ohio to Speak

Professor Honline is known as a leader along the line of religious education. For a number of years he has been professor of religious education at Bonebrake Union Theological seminary, Dayton, Ohio. More recently he has been connected with the educational department of the International Sunday School association. He is one of the regular instructors at the Lake Geneva Training school in Wisconsin, perhaps the largest training camp for Sunday school workers in the country. He will give a series of six lectures at the convention here.

A special feature of the afternoon's session of the convention will be a roll call of the various Sunday schools of New Hanover county. Each Sunday school is expected to have a representative present. The committee on arrangements is expecting the roll call on schools and the report which will show the number present from each school to create a friendly rivalry for attendance from the various Sunday schools.

There will be six sessions of the convention, two each day, afternoon and night, beginning this afternoon and closing Tuesday night. The arrangement committee is urging that every Sunday school worker in the city attend the convention.

The committee on arrangements is composed of the following Sunday school workers of the city: C. W. Polvogt, chairman, superintendent; St. Paul's Lutheran; D. H. Wilcox, superintendent First Baptist; W. W. Morton, superintendent Presbyterian; J. U. Kink, superintendent Grace Methodist; R. E. Tapp, superintendent Shepherd Episcopal; R. P. McClannay, superintendent Advent; Levi Walton, superintendent Church of Disciples.

ing capacity can be made to take care of 525 people. Also on this floor will be room for the superintendent's library and five class rooms, and a large room for the junior department.

The second floor is taken up with balconies, the upper part of the assembly room and seven class rooms.

The interior is finished in white oak woodwork, all of the floors being of cork tile, and the dividing walls constructed so as to be sound proof. The entire treatment of the interior will be of Gothic style with exposed chamfered wood member trusses spanning the Sunday school assembly room.

The building committee is composed of J. Holmes Davis, chairman; Rev. J. O. Mann, H. Lucy Hunt, Laurence Sprunt and C. L. Meister.

"LISTEN LESTER" PLEASES AUDIENCES AT ACADEMY

"Listen Lester," matinee and evening attraction at the Academy of Music, "listened" satisfactorily to Wilmington audiences. Its looks also met with marked evidence of approval. With snappy lines, dancing of exceptional merit and an on-the-job chorus, the Cort comedy company proved an efficacious antidote for downheartedness. "Listen Lester," in its construction, is typical of the Broadway success.

'SUNSHINE' HAWKS HERE WITH SMILE

Will Speak Twice Today and Continue Here Throughout the Week

Coming especially to deliver a series of his inimitable and inspiring talks to boys and young men, under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian association, "Sunshine" Hawks, beloved in Wilmington as a result of former visits, will make two appearances in the city this afternoon.

His first address will be delivered at the men's meeting at the Victoria theater at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon; one hour later he will speak at the mass meeting of boys at the Y. M. C. A. Beginning tomorrow night, Mr. Hawks will speak every evening for a week, with special attention to young men and older boys, at Grace Methodist church. The hour will be 7:30 o'clock.

At other times during the week, the "sunshiny" visitor will be heard at the various schools, at the cotton mills and the railroad shops—quite probably at other places also, as "Sunshine" Hawks is always in demand.

From Spartanburg, where Mr. Hawks has recently conducted one of his happiness campaigns, Odie B. Hinnant, boys' work secretary of the Y. M. C. A., has received a letter telling of remarkable success. "Sunshine" Hawks has been a "wonderful inspiration" to the boys and young men of Spartanburg, the letter said.

TO PETITION CHANGE OF PARKING REGULATIONS

Councilman Hall, However, Would Oppose Request

With the hope of having city council change the Second street automobile parking regulation, which was put into effect by the police department several months ago, petitions that will be presented to the city fathers at their next meeting, are being circulated among automobile owners and motorists of the city. It is understood that quite a number of signatures have been attached to the petitions.

Asked yesterday if he thought that council would order the police department to change the present regulation, Councilman James M. Hall, in charge of the public safety department, said that he did not. He explained that council ordered the original regulation, which allowed cars to be parked head-on at the curb, to be changed primarily because, with a great number of cars lined up on both sides of the street, fire trucks found it difficult to get through the narrow space. Councilman Hall believes that the petition is presented to council on Wednesday, he will have little trouble convincing those who tender it that it would be highly impracticable to change the existing parking regulation.
