The movement was incongested credits growing augurated after Senator Harris, Demcorat, Georgia, had advised speedy farmers to passage of the legislation, declaring merchants "that tens of thousands of undesirables, bute their some of them typhus-stricken, are to be let in the country." unless immioutstandings, gration barriers were put up. The immigration measure by agreelending ment of Republican leaders will be given privileged status tomorrow. A final vote next week ed with confidence expressed generally that the legislation would be salvaged from the congressional jam. While senate leaders were making plans to rescue the immigration bill from the jam and thereby place a limit on the number of immigrants arriving at American ports, Chairman Johnson of the house immigration committee, in an address, charged New York city health authorities with "passing the buck" to the public health service for failure to prevent the introduction of typhus into the country.

Health Commissioner Copeland delared in statement that immigration inspection facilities in Atlantic ports, notably New York, Boston and Philadelphia, were "disgracefully ineffective" and urged that local health authorities in the cities co-operate. He said that every resource of the New York department would be used to prevent disease laden or filthy immigrants arriving here, either directly from Europe or through other American ports. Dr. Copeland, who for two weeks has been urging federal officials to greater vigilance, said he was greatly encouraged by dispatches from abroad that emigration from central Europe had been suspended, this action, he said, was, undoubtedly the result of his protests, and was brought about through investigations by United States public health service representatives
