Keats
(On February 23, 1821, John Keats died at the age of 25. How astonishingly does the change of leaving the world impress a sense of its natural beauties upon us?" John Keats. When he drew near to the door of death, How green the grass grew by the road! How sweet the honeysuckle's breath! How fair the brooks of Hampstead flowed! When he went out from life's brief way, How liberal was earth's caress— As if she lavished to repay What he had wrought of loveliness! —Daniel Henderson in New York Evening Post.

A Valentine
Friends in Southport and Wilmington have received dainty little cards edged in true baby blue reading as follows: "Announcing the arrival of Louise Howerton Partick on February 14. Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Partick, Jr."

The parents of this wee lady of Plymouth, spent the fall and winter of 1919-20 in Southport where Mr. Partick had charge of St. Philip's church. Little Miss Partick has a proud auntie in Wilmington, Mrs. W. R. Noe.

Any Extra Fairy Tales?
Richmond Times Dispatch: "No department of the Settlement House, at 1104 West Cary street, gives more real pleasure to the younger visitors than does the library, which is conducted most informally by Miss Katherine Ricks and Miss Roberta Trigg. There are no strict rules and regulations to antagonize juvenile dispositions, and, although the children are urged to be careful of the volumes, the committee feels that an occasional lost book is better than an absence of appreciation on the part of all the might-be patrons.

"There are approximately 500 volumes in the library, which is open every Thursday afternoon and night. At that time the room is well filled with young readers, who go over the books, comparing and deciding which is the best to take home with them. First choice is almost always fairy tales for the girls and adventure for the boys, and the several boys' serials now obtainable are greatly in demand. Stories of hunting, the air service, the sea and, in fact, anything appealing to the imagination, is desired by the youngsters.

"Then there are the tots who proudly carry home Mother Goose and depend on the older members of their families to spell out the long words for them, and from those old familiar tales they proceed to the magic fairy lore which represents an entire world to little folk of imagination. It requires a large number of volumes to satisfy these boys and girls, and, while the Social Workers of the Nurses' Settlement, which conducts the house, is not making a special appeal for books at this time, it is pointed out that if anybody, has some appropriate ones to give away they will always find a welcome there. "Magazines, too, always are desired at the Settlement. Miss Rogers, especially if they are recent and those persons who send their periodicals as soon as they have read them, as was the rule in war times in supplying the soldiers, are regarded as very desirable of the work. All magazines are enjoyable, but a new one carries with it the maximum of value. Miss Trigg and Miss Ricks are delighted to give information concerning the library or to send for contributions."

The bridegroom is a well known young man of this city.

RIVENBARK PERSHAKE

Brilliant Social Affairs
WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—Chief of the functions in celebration of Washington's birthday was a military reception at the Army and Navy club in honor of General John J. Pershing, who welcomed nearly 2,000 visitors between noon and 2 o'clock. The affair took on all the features of a white house reception of past administrations, with the guests forming in line on the sidewalk and making their way to the main lounge of the club through a double line of sentries.

"General Pershing stood facing a Stuart canvas of George Washington. The decoration of flags and bunting was elaborate. The navy band played a waltz of primroses and palms. Primroses also decorated the long tables which lined the sides of the main dining room on the top floor. The special occasion was the presentation of the club, Brig. Gen. George Richards, U. S. M. C.; the vice-president, Major Gen. Arthur Murray; Lieut. Commander R. H. R. Rogers and other officers of the organization."

Among those entertaining at the Everglades club at Palm Beach, on the night of Washington's birthday, were Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Lewis. The New York Times gives this graphic account of the festivities of that night: "PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 22.—Palm Beach's largest social affair of the season, the annual Washington's Birthday ball at the Royal Poinciana tonight, was a gala event, fully 2,000 persons attending. Parties came here from every near-by resort for the ball."

"The big ballroom of the Poinciana presented a festive scene with the decorations of richly gowned women. The decorations represented a scene as on a carnival night in Washington during inauguration week, with the patriotic note predominating. The carnival spirit reigned, its cumulative effect ending in a confetti battle. A seated supper was served in the dining room at midnight and afterwards many adjourned to the Palm room for dancing until the early hours.

"Dinner parties were numerous in the Garden grill, the Country club and the Everglades club, the Beach club and throughout the cottage colony, the hosts taking their guests to the ball afterward.

"Washington's birthday was celebrated as a gala holiday in every respect. Late in the evening a very attractive scene with its many yachts fully dressed and flying scores of banners. In the afternoon there were held sports which attracted a large throng. There were more persons at the beach yesterday than ever before, making the 1921 ball the biggest in the history of the place."

"The custom since the war has been to go to charity, the beneficiary being the charities of Palm Beach county."

Net At St. Augustine
The charity ball given on Washington's birthday at the Alcazar Casino by William McCauliffe in aid of the Florida hospital surpassed any affair ever given here. Several thousand persons were present, including many from the army and navy circles."

A New Hat For Every Mood

MILAN hats with just the slightest suggestion of a droop to their brims rank high in the spring fashions. Their crowns are a-bloom with gay flowers.

CELLOPHANE, a thousand times more beautiful than the glistening bases of last year's hats, embellishes many of spring's most charming millinery modes. Some hats are evolved entirely from cellophane; others use it judiciously as a garniture.

A TRIMMING particularly beloved by this season's hats is that which trails gracefully from the crown of the hat to the wearer's shoulder. Many bits of headgear of this type are shown in our showing of Spring Millinery modes at—
