TREATY SEEMS TO SAY One Killed at Burgaw on A. C.

Secretary Hughes Did Not Intend to Leave Door Open for This Country

By DAVID LAWRENCE

(Copyright, 1921, by The Star) WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—Secretary treaty with Germany doesn't permit consent of the senate.

But there is a divergence of opinion thing now is to see whether the allies administration as absolutely final or whether they believe the door is still open for a future administration to take the vacant chair in the council of the league.

It is pointed out by those who differ with Mr. Hughes that the present administration did not feel bound to consult the senate when a representative was sent officially to the supreme council and that if the executive cared to do so he could send an American diplomat to take America's seat in the council of the league. The allies couldn't possibly misunderstand the presence of an American representative at the council of the league for the new treaty specifically says the United States is not bound by any provisions of the convenant or action of the council 'unless the United States gives its The department of state is authority for the view that the words 'United States' as used in the new pact with Germany mean the United States as a constitutional fact which implies of course that the President and secretary of state have certain powers of agreement with other nations which do not require the assent of congress and certain powers which necessitate ratification by the senate It is therefore possible for the Presi dent and secretary of state to concur in certain coupses of action taken by the council of the league without asking senate ratification.

Certainly the present administration has no such intention. Ambassador Harvey was right when he predicted that the Harding administration wouldn't have anything to do directly or indirectly with the league but the significant fact is that if ar administration comes into power which is more friendly to the league than the incumbent authorities it may be possible for the new treaty with Germany to be interpreted as permitting an American representative to sit in the council officially or unofficially and represent the president of the United States.

The allies and the other countries of the world must decide the question. The membership of the council specifically designated to include the United States. The council has the right to increase or diminish its membership but must have the approval of the assembly. Shall sthe seat of the United States be filled by some other nation or shall it always remain vacant as a standing invitation to the American government to send a representative to the council any time it wants to determine whether to give its assent or not to an action by the council. Since the new treaty with Germany indicates that the United States might conceivably want to concur in some things done by the league the allies would be denying America an opportunity to get the facts first hand through an official or unofficial observer if they formally eliminated the name of the United States from charter membership in the council But its up to the other nations. So far as the present administration is concerned it shows indifference as to whether the seat is kept vacant or filled by some other country.

Administration officials are inclined to resent any interpretation being placed upon the various parts of the new German treaty except the one they had in mind when the document was drafted and it was recalled today that the last administration also resented any other interpretatio or article to except the one it claimed to . ava had in mind at Paris. Nevertheless the opponents of article ten succeeded in defeating the whole treaty because they persuaded a majority of the senate to believe that the mooted article made it possible for the words "United States" to be construed as meaning the executive and not necessarily

(Special to The Star)

BURGAW, N. C., Aug. 31.-There was a tragedy enacted near Burgaw this morning before day on the Coast Line, when a young negro was killed, presumably by the train passing here at 4:30 o'clock. This followed the breaking into the store of Mrs. Huhn here some time in the night, discovered Hughes is of the opinion that the new when another young negro, the companion of the one that was killed, came up town to get a doctor to go and look after his companion.
