McBee's Resignation Accepted By Governor

Andrew Kestler is Successor On Highway Commission.

By BROCK BARKLEY.
 RALEIGH, Jan. 5.—Governor Morrison today accepted the resignation of John C. McBee, of Mitchell county, as a member of the State Highway commission, and appointed Andrew M. Kestler, Morganton manufacturer, to succeed him. Mr. Kestler telegraphed his acceptance of the appointment this afternoon.

"I desire to thank you for your friendship and loyalty to me, and I shall always feel myself honored to have served under the most constructive and progressive governor that North Carolina has had within my memory, and with Frank Page, chairman, and the other very excellent gentlemen with whom I have been associated on the commission." Mr. McBee wrote in his letter of resignation.

Mr. McBee's resignation concludes a tumultuous term on the highway commission. People in his district, the eighth, have often been after him with charges of discrimination in the award of highway work. They have claimed he gave his home county of Mitchell the better share in the division among the counties.
