Colonel Taylor Speaks to Tileston Students

The program for public safety week at the Tileston school was opened by an informal address delivered by Col. Walker Taylor at the regular chapel hour yesterday. Colonel Taylor spoke to the boys and girls on the duty they owe to themselves and their country and the necessity of preserving their physical fitness if they are in any way to live up to the demands made upon them by the circumstances with which they must inevitably come in contact in the future.

You boys and girls are the most valuable assets of this city, because it is you who will determine its fate in the days to come. You do not belong to yourself, but to your community and to your nation. Some of you will occupy important positions and all of you will have some necessary purpose," he told them.

For this reason, as well as for more personal considerations, he urged that during the coming week the school children of Wilmington devote their attention to the means best calculated to preserve their own safety. In this way, he stated, it is hoped that by their own efforts during one week habits of thought and action of the sanest kind may be established which will carry over into the rest of the year.

Several other talks along the same line have been planned for the school week in order that the children may be taught to realize the value of the work attempted.

SHORTHAND AFFORDS FINE OPPORTUNITIES

Offers Foothold to More remunerative Employment in Business World

Most people who study shorthand do so because of the opportunity it affords of earning a livelihood. It is absolutely true that in no other direction can a young man or woman so readily obtain a foothold on the ladder which leads to business success. Shorthand, like the telephone, the telegraph, and the trans-continental express, has become one of the indispensable mediums of modern business. It is sometimes said that letters are "the silent salesmen of the business world." By means of letters the American business man reaches out to the uttermost parts of the earth and gets business in every city, in every town and village to which the mails are carried.

The stenographer is in daily contact with the executive who directs business affairs. Practically every business transaction requires the dictation of correspondence, reports, statistics, and so on. The stenographer gets at first hand all the factors which enter into the making of business decisions and thus has an unparalleled opportunity to study the motives which actuate business men.

Unfortunately few stenographers realize the tremendous possibilities inherent in their work. The vast majority are content to do that work in a routine way day after day. They are quite satisfied to do just enough to "get by." Right there lies the great opportunity for the alert and energetic young man or woman who is about to undertake the study of shorthand. Modern business training courses organized to meet modern business requirements are available. Rowe Shorthand—the Modern System—has put success within the reach of all young people; it has made possible a larger measure of success for those who are willing to put forth the time and effort which will raise them above the plane of mediocrity.

Rowe Shorthand has just been introduced at the Mott Business college, of this city. This action on the part of those responsible for the management of the institution demonstrates their constant desire to keep the Mott Business college in the front rank of modern business training schools.

A TRIBUTE TO REV. EDGAR TUFTS

"Faithful unto death" is the record of the life of one of God's noblemen, the Rev. Edgar Tufts, of Banners Elk, North Carolina, who died Saturday morning, December 6th. His fatal illness was doubtless contracted through exposure to cold and contagion in ministering to the people to whom he dedicated his life, as pastor and teacher, friend and counsellor.

His idea of duty was revealed in his answer to the question of a fellow student as they were leaving the seminary for their respective fields of service. His friends, knowing he had calls to several attractive places, asked why he had chosen Banners Elk, then considered one of the worst places in North Carolina. His answer was prompt and characteristic: "That is the reason I am going there." His choice has been fully justified by the change wrought through his unflinching devotion to his purpose, to make the bad good, and the good better.

Without a church building or school house, he preached wherever he could gather a little congregation and taught a few children around his study fire on winter evenings. His kindness and tact quickly won the confidence and friendship of his immediate neighbors and later the support and co-operation of friends in this and other states. This small beginning has grown into the Banners Elk Presbyterian church. Lees-McRae institute, with graded and high school departments, Grace hospital, and Grandfather orphanage.

The church has an active and growing membership, which for some years has worshipped in a beautiful and artistic building of native stone, erected by native workmen—a building that could not be erected in a city for less than thirty or forty thousand dollars. The Lees-McRae institute, until recently housed in three wooden buildings, has already sent out more than a thousand girls, some of them making Christian homes as wives and mothers, some serving as teachers and trained nurses. These wooden buildings are being replaced by larger permanent stone buildings, one already completed and Mr. Tufts had the joy of knowing that the ground was broken for the second before his death.

The wooden Grace hospital building is now being replaced by a substantial, well-equipped brick building. This hospital, though handicapped by lack of space and equipment, has nobly met a great need in a large and scattered community, and this new building with its complete equipment will enable Dr. Tufts and his assistants to render a larger service to an even larger territory.

Grandfather orphanage has grown from a small house, accommodating a dozen children, to a large plant comprising boys' and girls' dormitories, school and industrial buildings, and a baby cottage. Under the superintendence of Mr. and Mrs. Holcomb, with their efficient helpers, these buildings house a happy family of more than 50 children of school age, and the baby cottage will care for about twenty babies. The orphanage farm contributes largely to the support of orphanage and schools. The electric light plant.

Health Returns to Belwood Citizen With 22 Pound Gain

M. F. Cook Declares Tanlac Completely Overcame Stomach Trouble of Several Years Standing

"Tanlac built me up twenty-two pounds, gave me good health in place of misery, and I am glad of the chance to tell how thankful I am," declared M. F. Cook, a well-known farmer and mica miner of Belwood, N. C. "My stomach got out of order several years ago and just kept getting worse till I was mighty badly run-down. Everything I ate disagreed with me and I got so I was afraid of food, and had no appetite. Sour stomach, gas and dizziness made my troubles a hundred times worse. I had splitting headaches one right after another, and never could get a good night's sleep. "Soon as I started on Tanlac I began to get better. Now I have an appetite I can hardly satisfy, sleep like a log and feel so good all over I can do as much work as any man. I can't recommend Tanlac too strongly." Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Over 35-million bottles sold.—Adv.

the grist and lumber mills, all serve the community, as well as the schools, church, hospital and orphanage. Mr. Tufts' enthusiasm for service was infectious, and drew to him a corps of teachers and other helpers, of missionary spirit, on salaries less than half paid for similar service elsewhere, thus enabling him to offer educational opportunities at very low cost.

THOSE TWINGES OF RHEUMATISM ARE LESSENERD
In many medical text-books you will find salicylic acid rated an abortive specific for attacking the pain of rheumatism. Salicylic acid is taken in its best form in TINGLE'S LAXO ASPIRIN.
This acid content of TINGLE'S LAXO ASPIRIN distends the tiny capillary blood vessels. It relaxes and induces a healthful perspiration. It is this that alleviates and in many cases stops the pain.
A digestant also found in TINGLES LAXO ASPIRIN prevents the stomach from being upset. A third ingredient, a laxative, completes the effective attack on the pain by ridding the body of poisonous wastes, which when retained in the body, are usually the real cause of the trouble.
Thus only in TINGLE'S LAXO ASPIRIN does one find the three remedies combined. Be sure to ask for TINGLE'S LAXO ASPIRIN, the improved aspirin with the three points:
—It's absorbed easily
—It relieves pain quickly
—It's a gentle laxative
