Star's News Bureau 312 Tucker Building BY BROCK BARKLEY RALEIGH, Jan. 10.—This is Governor Morrison's administration and I have never projected my personal views into his constructive policies but have striven to support and strengthen the administration in every possible way without embarrassment to the governor or myself. Max Gardner, the 1920 primary opponent of the chief executive, when asked for a statement today as to his opinion of the Morrison program of state development. The former lieutenant governor came here from Shelby late last night. He indorses the Morrison administration fully and he called on the governor today to tell him so. The two had an extended chat. Afterwards, Governor Morrison declared that one of the things he has appreciated most since entering the governor's office has been his former opponent's attitude towards the administration. Mr. Gardner put down reports that differences arising from the 1920 primary would be injected into this general assembly. Factional differences played no part in the 1921 session, he said, adding that he considered the staunch support that has been given Governor Morrison's program from legislators and representatives who were the most loyal of Gardner men evidence that service to North Carolina is the dominating influence.
