CALDWELL COUNTY AND THE DAIRY BUSINESS The Jersey Bulletin and Dairy World, published in Indianapolis, Ind., carried the following item of the recent pure-bred Jersey sale in Caldwell county:

"Through the efforts of County Agent D. W. M. Roberts and the banks of Lenoir, 21 registered Jerseys, same being the entire herd of J. W. Robinson of Catawba county, were purchased and sold at auction on December 9, 1922. The Jerseys were purchased with the idea of holding the auction and standing a loss, if necessary, so as to put more dairy cattle in Caldwell county. The sale was conducted by Prof. R. H. Ruffner, secretary of the North Carolina Jersey Cattle Club, and professor of animal husbandry at the State college at Raleigh. Instead of being a loss to the instigators of this sale, a total profit of $350 was realized, and many of the buyers of these Jersey cattle have expressed a desire to have another sale held very soon."

Last week there was a series of dairy meetings held throughout Caldwell county, conducted by J. A. Arey and A. C. Kimey, all of which were largely attended. Caldwell county will be heard from in a few years in the dairy business.—Gastonia Gazette.

Warsaw Quints Beat Rose Hill Two Games (Special to the Star)

WARSAW, Feb. 2.—The basketball quints of the Warsaw high school defeated the Rose Hill teams in two games Thursday afternoon at Rose Hill. The girls' score was 26 to 9. Children's Party on S. S. America. Naturally with the children being amused in this manner their parents are able to enjoy the voyage to the fullest. It is not likely, however, that they get any more pleasure out of it than the kiddies, who, back home again, have something to talk about for months to come.

The "President Harding" features a children's dining room and the interest taken by Chief Steward "Billy" Lynn, in satisfying the palates and sea-going appetites of his young charges, is vast. It is a very ill child indeed who misses a meal while aboard that vessel.

Lynn always has at least one special dinner party every trip and if some youngster is so fortunate as to have a birthday while at sea, he or she is the guest of honor.

For these occasions the dining room is specially decorated. Souvenirs are at every plate and a particularly appealing dinner is served, with mental cards bearing the name of host and hostess and those of the juvenile guests. These are always highly treasured by the youngsters.

Deserts and pastries are made in odd molds which make them really too good to be eaten—though they are prominent and the affair takes a prominent place in each child's remembered thing to be always remembered.

It is small wonder that Lynn is regarded as a cross between a Santa Claus and the king of entertainers by the children after they have dined upon the goodies he provides in a room resembling fairyland.

Children Are Royally Entertained On United States Steamships

Children's Party on S. S. America.

New York Day by day, in every way, ocean travel is being made more comfortable, more attention is being given to the amusement of passengers aboard the big, modern steamers. This is particularly so aboard the vessels of the United States Lines, where entertainment of a decidedly varied nature in both social and athletic form is provided, not only for adults, but for children.

Until recently, parents contemplating a trip abroad oftentimes hesitated to be left with relatives, or taken along to be amused while aboard ship at the expense of Papa or Mama's pleasure. That is not so nowadays, however, for parents can now sail for Europe with their offspring, knowing that special care will be taken of the children on the vessels of the United States Lines, the number of children passengers is steadily increasing.

Stewards and stewardesses aboard these liners are specially detailed to look out for the wants of the youngsters and take great pleasure in their work.

The America has a special children's playroom, where games of every description are played, under the direction of a steward who is an artist in amusing children of every age. Special dances are held every trip, with the ship's orchestra in attendance.

Officers of Army Secret Service Tells How Clever Woman Was Trapped and Executed

Early in the summer of 1918, intelligence officers of the American army were confronted with the alarming fact that Germany had definite and detailed information about a number of American divisions and their location.

"German officers on capture boasted of the ease with which their country learned of the movements of the American army, and the most deplorable thing about it all was that their information was so remarkably accurate," writes Maj. C. E. Russell in McClure's Magazine for February.

Major Russell, of the American intelligence service, was entrusted with the rather broad duty of stopping the "leak" which had resulted in the death of thousands of American soldiers, fighting against the enemy who had the advantage of advance information.

His investigations took him to Biarritz where hundreds of American officers were sent to recuperate from wounds at a Red Cross hospital there. Biarritz was so close to the Spanish border, and the harvest of information so promising, that the German secret service had sent its best spies into the town. True, most of these had been driven out by the activity of the American and French secret service; American officers warned not to talk with strangers and above all not to discuss anything pertaining to our army.

But still the information leaked out in great volumes, and when Major Russell went to Biarritz the situation was desperate.

In a few weeks he had found the spy and gathered evidence for conviction, and one morning a firing squad exacted the penalty. The spy was a woman. Mrs. Powell (which is not her real name) had been a charming hostess to the wounded American soldiers. They made her a confidant and her sympathy led them to disclose important information. She audaciously used her unsuspecting victims to send the information they had given her to confederates who relayed it to Germany.
