Ribbon Sandwiches

By BERTHA E. SHAPLEIGH
Of Columbia University

Remove crust from a loaf of white bread. Cut into slices an eighth of an inch thick.

Work half a cup of butter with a spoon until creamy. Color it green, using spinach juice or color paste and mix with one-fourth cup of grated horseradish. Season with salt, and spread the bread with this mixture, placing one slice upon another until the sandwich consists of 10 layers.

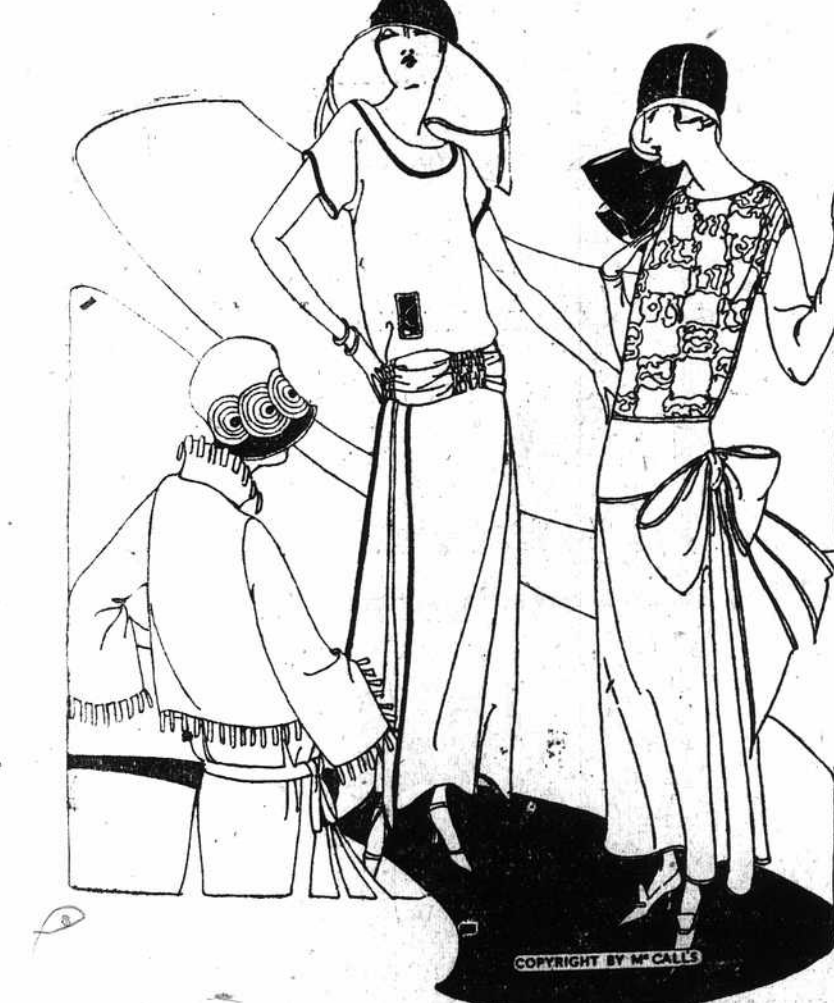

Press firmly together, and put in a cold place until time place until time to serve; then cut these piles into slices one-fourth inch thick.

If it's necessary to keep the sandwiches in a napkin wrung out of hot water or in wax paper.

Ribbon sandwiches can be made very attractive by placing various red, green and yellow fillings between the slices of bread. Repeat this twice. Chopped pimientos with cheese, green peppers, ham and hard-cooked egg make good fillings, combined with butter or mayonnaise.

Fabric Hats
Fabric hats of plain or changeable taffeta are very popular now and combine well with the small flowers and fruit that are such popular trimmings.

Only Three-Piece Models

The spring openings of famous Parisian couturiers have news of interest to women everywhere. The fullness of a gown continues to be placed at the front and sides; the waistline is slightly higher, but doesn't reach the normal waistline even yet; the straight silhouette divides honors with circular and bouffant outlines. All suits are three-piece models. Eton, box and cape-back jackets are the most popular styles for suit coats. Skirts are slightly fuller and frequently circular. The accompanying blouses are of plain or printed silk and frequently feature jabot trimming.

WITH ANY OLD FROCK AND DEAUVILLE SCARF MY-LADY WILL BE IN STYLE

WEARING THE DEAUVILLE SCARF IN A FEW, AMONG THE MANY FASHIONS IN WHICH IT CAN BE DRAPED SO EFFECTIVELY.

By MARION HALE

The most distinctive novelty of this season—a good many seasons, in fact—is the colorful Deauville scarf. Deauville, as you doubtless know, is the great French summer resort—one of the gayest, one of the most expensive, one of the most fashionable in Europe.

It was at Deauville, you may remember, that King Alfonso of Spain spent a lot of time last season dancing with any number of pretty girls, giving an expensive brooch to each of those he favored thus—making himself so popular, indeed, that this year his advisers said they'd rather he stayed at home—his cutting around had attracted a little too much attention.

For Sports Wear
Anyway, the Deauville scarf first appeared at this famed resort—originally intended for sports wear.

But it was too much of a success to be limited, in its activities, to any time, place or style of frock, and today it's featured in connection with evening gowns, afternoon attire, house dresses and even kimono.

It's added pep and dash to the dull costumes women had accepted for business wear and it's relieved the deadly monotony of the collarless neckline.

Naturally there are bound to be variations, so it isn't surprising to find ribbon being used decoratively in a manner which the scarf plainly inspired.

Save Your Frock
The photographs will give you suggestions that may enable you to save the old frock you'd intended to discard, evolving a snappy Easter costume from it instead, by purchase of a few yards of ribbon and the expenditure of a little ingenuity.

To make the ribbon fichu (lower right) you need three yards of taffeta ribbon, preferably figured, doubled over with a loop knot in the very center and then the doubled pieces stitched together for half a yard, then knotted again. One end is drawn through the loop knot and the other's used to make the bow or knot that ties it.

At the upper left is shown an adjustable drape that may be used large or small, as you please. To make it, two pieces of ribbon are mitered to make a corner—one piece about a yard long with a double knot or loop in it through which the other end, about three-fourths of a yard, slips.

Fore and Aft
The upper right and lower left are fore and aft views of the same arrangement of the scarf. Four pieces of wide ribbon are mitered together by double hemstitching or fagoting. The opening formed by the pieces must be large enough to slip easily over the head. Once on, the scarf may be worn as a square or it can be pulled around so that one point comes down in front with both shoulders and the back adorned with the other points. The shoulder points may be knotted or only one point tied. The clever girl can make her own adjustments.

For Freckled, Rough or Muddy Complexions
The freckling, discoloring or roughening to which delicate skins are subject after exposure to wind or sun, often appearing in early spring, may readily be gotten rid of. Mercorized wax, spread lightly over the face before retiring and removed in the morning with soap and water, completely peels off the discolored skin. Get an ounce of the wax at any drugist's. There's no more effective way of banishing freckles or other untoward defects. Little skin particles come off each day, so the process doesn't even temporarily mar the complexion, and 'one soon acquires a brand new, spotless, girlishly beautiful face. adv.
