

UPSHAW TO SPEAK ON PROHIBITION IN GREAT BRITAIN

Georgia Representative Will Address International Conference at Gotenburg

NEW YORK, July 4.—Representative Uphaw, of Georgia, sailed on the steamship Stockholm yesterday to address the international conference at Gotenburg on the "Economic Value of Prohibition."

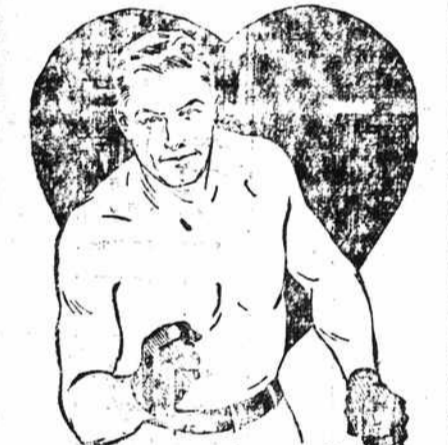

"We will stop in England and Scotland to campaign for the 'drys' in opposition to British editors who criticize the United States for enforcing our laws on foreign ships that defy the prohibition ruling."

England's attitude has changed since a few years ago when her back was against the wall," said Mr. Uphaw, adding that "America has been on the drunk for so long it is natural she like a drunkard, should take a long time to sober up."

Monument to American Heroes Unveiled on Fourth in Paris

PARIS, July 4.—(Associated Press)—A monument in honor of American volunteers in the French army who lost their lives in the world war was unveiled today in the Place des Etats Unis.

More than 50,000 French people threw in their hard-earned sous and francs when France passed the bid. Contributions ranged from 25,000 francs given by the Bank of France, to ten centimes, brought in proudly by little school boys and girls who, when disaster threatened their firesides were barely old enough to lay their admiration for "les Americains."

sculpted by Jean Boucher, a young French sculptor who fought beside those early American volunteers. It represents an American in French uniform calling to his compatriots to follow his example. The face of the statue has been executed in the likeness of Allam Seeger, the soldier-poet, who wrote a prophetic poem on a rendezvous with death at some disputed barricade. On the base of the monument are engraved the names of all American volunteers in the French army who were killed in France, including Norman Prince, Victor Chapman, Kenneth Weeks, Kiffin Rockwell, Russell Kelly, Richard and Edward Hall, Earle Flisk and others.

POOR BOY PRESIDENTS, GOVERNOR SMITH'S THEME

Former Newsboy Tells Tammany Braves Few Rich Men Reach White House

NEW YORK, July 4.—Governor Alfred E. Smith, of New York, declared last night by national Democratic Chairman, Norman E. Mack of Buffalo, to be an avowed candidate for the presidency today discussed in a fourth of July speech at Tammany Hall the relative chance of a rich and a poor man becoming a president. The governor, whose proudest boast is that he rose from the fish markets and newsboydom, said:

"If ever a country was ruled by the plain people that make it up, it is the United States of America. Ours is a land of equal opportunity and that means that opportunity accorded to the rich and poor alike."

"As a cold matter of fact, no man of great wealth has ever been elected president of this country. Some of the brightest passages in our history records the elevation to high office of men from humble surroundings."

"In spite of the fact that our government is built upon principles that admit of no discussion of human frailties, it has brought about enemies within and without. To my mind our fear if we are to have one, must come from the acts of those within our own ranks. They are divided into two classes, the ignorant and the wilful. Education and its progress will take care of them both."

"They build their hopes of success on the popular fallacy that there is in this country, a ruling class. No man or set of men rules this country. That argument in an appeal to popular passion and prejudice and the thought that they desire to plant in the minds of the gullible is that wealth is a ruling force in this country. Nothing could be further from the truth. The declaration of independence," he said, "was after all, in the nature of a political platform and was nothing more than the setting forth of a political principle. The constitution was adopted he asserted to give the nation the right to safeguard the right of an unorganized majority as against a what could be the tyranny of a minority."
