Harding Sails For Alaska First President to Visit Territory Since Purchase

The arrangement was proposed for determination of what must be manifestly accepted as a practice that should be obsolete in American industry. I still entertain the hope that the questions of social importance should be solved by action inside industries themselves for it is only such solutions that are consonant with American life and institutions.

"I am impressed that in the reasoning of the report great weight should be attached to the fact that in the present shortage of labor it would cripple our entire prosperity if the changes were abruptly made. In the hope that this question could be disposed of I am wondering if it would not be possible for the steel industry to consider giving an undertaking that before there shall be any reduction in the staff of employees or the industry through any recession of demand for steel products or at any time when there is a surplus of labor available that then the change should be made from the two shifts to the three shifts basis.

Would Satisfy Public

"I can not but believe that such an undertaking would give great satisfaction to the American people as a whole and would indeed establish pride and confidence in the ability of our industries themselves to solve matters which are so conclusively advocated by the public."

The chief executive also referred to the merchant marine and the social evolution which was setting up "new conditions of industry in this land."

"Under the old time conceptions of fancied ease in professional life and the manifestly largely rewards of commerce" Mr. Harding said, "there has been a tendency to get away from the trades and the tasks out of which are wrought the very essentials of all attainments. We must, we do recognize that the wage earner is quite as essential as the professional man, and the nobility of riteous employment is the same in either pursuit. Our aim ought to be, not to remove the worker from creation from the essential pursuits and activities, but to equalize the rewards. We can't cease work; there is no life without labor. It would not be endurable if there were.

"We are making fine progress in the great social evolution. Long ago we set up new standards of living, new conditions of industry in this land. We are constantly striving, not for conditions which tend to equalize, but 'conditions of greater inspiration and for the contentment of the individual."

"It is another American aspiration on which I wished to touch today. You of Tacoma are proud of your harbor and dock facilities. You provide the dock facilities and the government improves the harbor. But of what value is either without shipping? A merchant marine is the worthy aspiration of every commercial nation. There can be no dependable commerce without carriers and there can be no eminence in American commerce without the promotion of a competitor's trade.

"This administration has been earnestly striving for a great and efficient American merchant marine. We had it once, when the seas of the world, but whited by a recession and the world there came a recession and the world we found us an inconsiderable maritime power. I have always believed that there would have been no war certainly if we had possessed a merchant marine comparable to our commercial aspirations. In the exigencies of a war we build ships as no nation ever builded before.

Will Operate Ships
"I do not for one moment believe in government ownership and operation as a permanent policy. But I prefer a hazardous venture to the surrender of our hopes for a merchant marine. So we mean to operate until we establish, though it cost far more than it was contemplated to expend in promoting private enterprise. It is vital to our national defense. It is necessary to our foreign commerce. It is necessary to maintain American eminence. So we mean to maintain the flag on the seas, hoping for the day when congress may reflect the sentiment of all the country, will sense the great necessity and compel the legislation required to turn to the rational way to triumph on the seas."

A few minutes after 2 p. m. the scheduled hour of departure, the United States naval transport, Henderson, which for the next 20 days will be in reality the white house, got under way, circled the harbor and steamed past the Tacoma stadium where a few minutes before the president and Mrs. Harding had received the goodbyes of Governor Hart of Washington, and where the president had declared for an American merchant marine second to none.

Checks At Sailing
As the big transport swung by the stadium, those assembled there to hear the president speak, stood and cheered. Mr. and Mrs. Harding acknowledged the cheers and waved farewell from the bridge until distance made them only indistinct figures to those on shore.

The president, as he boarded the vessel, was in an unusually happy frame of mind pleased by the reception given him in Tacoma, glad to obtain a few days rest after the 15 day transcontinental trip, and overjoyed by the prospect of realizing the ambition he has held almost ever since he entered the white house—an ambition to visit the great northern territory and to obtain first hand information with respect to its problems.

Two days of steady sailing lay ahead of the party when it left here, up through the inside passage of British Columbia and Alaska. It will not be a monotonous voyage by any means for the boat will pass up through narrow, winding channels with mountains rising directly from the water's edge.

First Stop At Ketchikan
The first stop will be made at Ketchikan, either Friday or Saturday, and after a stay there the Henderson will go on to Wrangell, arriving there to spend Sunday, according to the tentative schedule.

The arrival at Juneau, the territorial capital, has been fixed for July 10, and three days later the party will reach Seward. Four days will then be devoted to the trip up the Alaskan railroad to Anchorage, Chickaloon, Nenana, and Fairbanks, within 200 miles of the arctic circle. At the Tanana river bridge at Nenana the president will drive the golden spike, symbolizing completion of the railroad constructed by the government to provide an outlet for the rich interior district. The return trip southward will be made by motor over the Richardson trail.

The president was accompanied by the three members of his cabinet whose departments are most directly interested in Alaska. They are Secretary Hoover of the commerce department; Secretary Work of the interior department, and Secretary Wallace of the agricultural department. Also in the party are Speaker Gillette, of the House, and Dr. Greeley of the forestry service.

CHARLES WARREN IS NEW SUPERINTENDENT OF ODD FELLOWS HOME

Marcus W. Jacobi Returned This Morning From Meeting of Board of Trustees

Marcus W. Jacobi, chairman of the board of trustees of the Odd Fellow's Orphan Home at Goldsboro, returned to this city this morning from a meeting of the board held in Raleigh yesterday, and announces the election of Chas. H. Warren, of Lenoir, as superintendent of the Goldsboro home succeeding Chas. O. Baird, resigned.

Mr. Jacobi is enthused over the selection of Mr. Warren as superintendent of the orphanage. Mr. Warren was chosen after the board of trustees had carefully considered almost two score applications for the position.

Mr. Warren is a member of Lenoir lodge No. 48, I. O. F., and is a graduate of the State college, through which institution he worked his way. He is a veteran of the World war.

Police Are Planning For Return of Chief

C. C. Cashwell and His Bride Are Expected Tomorrow Morning

City police yesterday were formulating plans for the home-coming of their chief, Claude C. Cashwell, and Mrs. Cashwell, who are expected to arrive here Saturday morning.

Chief and Mrs. Cashwell, who were married several days ago at Los Angeles, Calif., are to live at 2013 Sander avenue, this city, in a residence owned by the chief.

A local furniture store today delivered to the Cashwells' future home a buffet which city policemen, several days ago, bought in contributions from each member of the force.

A detachment of "coops" is expected to greet Chief Cashwell and his bride on their arrival here.

assembly, for which he thinks there is of longer occasion, since the governor is empowered to call an extra session to meet any emergency.

The governor in his message called attention to the taxation laws of North Carolina and of Kentucky as forming good models for his state, but said he was not waded to any one single plan, seeking "only the most equitable distribution of the tax burden."

A non-political commission, in connection with the committees of the senate and house was suggested to make a careful study of the tax plans and machinery of other states and adapt them to the peculiar needs of Georgia.
