He set the number of cattle pro ducers in the United States at 5,000,000, told how hundreds of other housands are engaged in process ing, still other hundreds of thousands in distributing and selling and at least 100,000,000 in consuming meats. By multiplying this by the consumption of all com munities in the nation it is possible to envision to what proportions the industry has grown. Mr. Jones touched only briefly on the industry's capacity to take care of defense needs by saying that the railroads are ready for transportation and the require.
