Six white and two negro anti-air-craft regiments are to be organized and trained at the Holly Ridge firing center, which will have a capacity of approximately 20,000 men.

In a briew interview yesterday morning Col. Montgomery pointed out that Wilmington is going to have a number of problems to face with the influx of people which will result from the erection of the Holly Ridge base. He expressed hope the people of the city would anticipate these problems as far as possible and would solve them before they make their presence felt.

Asked if an early announcement that the first six cadres of 128 men each would be stationed at the camp on Dec. 20 still held good, Col. Montgomery said he did not know, as he was concerned only with the building of the camp.
