Flour Arsenal Vital to Kitchen Defense Needs

MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX NEA Service Staff Writer

The flour bin is one of the important arsenals of home nutritional defense. It is important to know the different types of flour. Wheat flour makes large, light loaves of bread. The wheat contains two special proteins. When mixed with liquid they form a sticky, elastic mass known as gluten.

Good quality gluten is very elastic. It can easily "double in bulk" without breaking. Flour that contains this high quality gluten is called "strong" flour. It is made from the hard wheat types and is the baker's first choice for making yeast bread.

In the modern milling process, the flour is separated into several streams, each slightly different. The grade of the flour depends on the way these streams are mixed. Patent flour is the usual grade sold in retail grocery stores.

CAKES NEED "WEAK" FLOUR

When you make fine cakes and pastry, you're interested in a tender texture—not in strong gluten. In fact, too much gluten makes the cake tough and rubbery. So, for cakes and pastry, the home baker uses a "weak" flour that comes from soft wheat.

Many homemakers prefer to buy just one kind of flour that will be suitable for anything they bake—bread, muffins, biscuits, or cake. For them there is an "all purpose" or "family" flour—a blend of hard and soft wheat, that has enough gluten to make good yeast bread and will also produce fairly tender cakes and quick breads.

Rye flour is also used for bread, but it is usually combined with wheat flour, because the gluten formed is not very elastic. Corn, oats, rice, potatoes, soybeans, lima beans and buckwheat flours contain no gluten. Mix them with wheat flour to make a light loaf of bread.

SIFT TO MEASURE

In following a recipe, exact measurements are important, and flour is probably the trickiest of the ingredients to measure. If the flour is packed down, you may be able to get as much as 1 1/2 cups into a one-cup measure. That's why recipes tell you to sift the flour before you measure it—except coarse whole-wheat flour, which will not go through an ordinary sifter.

In making dough, the cook may be puzzled to find that the recipe suggests only an approximate amount of liquid. Recipes can not be specific on this point when types of flour vary so much. Strong flours absorb more liquid than weak flours, so it takes more water or milk to make them into a soft dough.

TOMORROW'S MENU

BREAKFAST: Orange juice, scrambled eggs, wholewheat toast, jam, coffee, milk.
LUNCHEON: Potato soup, toasted French bread, apple-sauce cake, American cheese, tea, milk.
DINNER: Sautéed leg lamb chops, French fried potatoes, buttered carrots, cole slaw, chocolate cream pie, coffee.

AMERICAN LEGION AUXILIARY MEETS

(Contributed)

The monthly meeting of the American Legion auxiliary was held Tuesday afternoon, February 4, with Mrs. Harvey V. Norris in the chair. The colors were advanced by Mrs. L. W. Vowell, sergeant at arms, and Mrs. E. R. Wilson, color guard. One verse of the national anthem was sung, followed by a prayer by Mrs. L. W. Davis, chaplain. The members stood in 30 seconds of silence as a tribute to the World War dead and recited in unison the preamble to the constitution of the auxiliary.

Mrs. R. G. Lytton, music chairman, presented Mrs. O. E. Durant, Jr., who delighted the audience with "Danny Boy" and "None But the Lonely Heart." She was accompanied by Cleve McGowan at the piano.

Miss Mary Taylor, R.N., spoke briefly on the nursing inventory conducted by the nursing board of New Hanover county. She requested any member knowing of active or inactive nurses in the city or county to urge them to register to meet any possible emergency. She clearly stated that even after registering the services of these nurses will be voluntary.

Mrs. Norris then displayed the new desk colors of the auxiliary and dedicated them with these words from the auxiliary handbook: "In the name of the Wilmington Unit No. 10, Department of North Carolina, the American Legion auxiliary, I now dedicate these colors. May they fly permanently as the emblem of freedom. Here is the flag of our country; safe within its folds is the freedom and loyalty of our nation. Beside it is the banner of the American Legion auxiliary; on its expanse is the emblem of our organization, the star of hope.

"I dedicate these colors to the objects of our unit, community, state and nation, and with them I dedicate our unit to the faithful service of our nation. You will join me in the salute to the flag of our country."

The secretary, Mrs. D. M. Holmes, read the minutes of the last meeting, which were approved. The treasurer, Mrs. F. W. Sears, was reported sick and her report will be read at the next meeting.

A letter was read from the Greensboro unit presenting the name of Mrs. Conyers as a candidate for department president, and requesting the endorsement of the local unit. It was voted that the delegates be sent to convention unopposed.

Mrs. Norris announced that Mrs. J. T. Barker has accepted the chairmanship of Gold Star mothers made vacant by the resignation of Mrs. H. M. Symmes, who has moved from the city. She also announced that the flag codes had been received and requested instructions as to the disposition of same. It was voted that they be turned over to the Americanism chairman, Mrs. J. B. Edwards, with the suggestion that they be turned over to H. M. Roland, superintendent of the county schools, to be distributed.

Mrs. Finley McMillan, rehabilitation chairman, reported sending eight cards to sick veterans, two trips made and clothing amounting to $20 given.

Hospital chairman, Mrs. L. W. Davis, read a letter of thanks from Mrs. Clavery, service worker at Oteen, for the cards sent the "boys" in the ward for January. It was voted that we send a suitable card and fifty cents each to the 16 men in this ward, for valentines.

Mrs. T. J. Gause, community service chairman, discussed on behalf of the Legion the coming of Rear Admiral Sterling, who will give a lecture, "Beyond the Pacific," on February 24. After presenting the Legion's proposition the unit voted to cooperate and Mrs. Norris appointed the following committee: Mrs. Gause, Mrs. H. M. Roland, and Mrs. Finley McMillan, to be in charge of ticket distribution.

Mrs. Norris announced that at

Dan Cupid In Washington Is An Interstate Agent

By JOHN GROVE, AP Feature Service Writer

WASHINGTON.—Government offices filled with talk of rearmament—new and bigger weapons—hold no terror for Dan Cupid and his ancient bow and arrow.

Take a look at marriage license bureau records. Cupid's working overtime and there are no bottle necks. Every day is Valentine's Day here.

Interstate marriages are the rule. The politicians' phrase: "From rockbound Maine to sunny California," means that Miss California and Mr. Maine probably met over a filing cabinet in some government office and decided on a transcontinental merger.

The records indicate that more interstate marriages take place in Washington than in other cities because there is a concentration of marriageable age residents representing all 48 states. A large segment of the Washington population is made up of federal employes, many of them appointed while in the lower age brackets and thus making for a large percentage unmarried on arrival.

Five years ago, Elmer L. Vaughan lived in LaCooner, Wash. His name was unknown to Mary G. McDonald of Goshen in southwest Virginia.

Vaughan, an RFC accountant, came to Washington and met the registered nurse from Goshen through a friend in the office. They were wed last spring.

Such marriages pose a vacation problem. Shall we go to my home or yours on annual leave? Most couples alternate.

Youngsters born in Washington have kin scattered all over the map.

Boarding houses are allies of the marriage license bureau.

Sociologists can make their graphs and charts of sectional differences in the U. S., but hundreds of east-west, north-south and in-between couples pool-pool any notion that there are differences. The twain meet here and get married.

Today's Woman Can 'Cope' Just As Well As Grandma

By RUTH MILLETT

All over the country women who belong to the Women's National Republican Club are receiving questionnaires asking information about their fitness for service in case of a national emergency.

Members are asked to check such types of ability as: driving a motor vehicle, ownership of a car, training in aviation, dietetics, canteen service, nursing, radio operation, typing, stenography, first aid, home hygiene, telegraph and telephone operation.

A glance at that list of possible skills shows that although today's woman, as her critics claim, may not be able to do everything Grandma could, she has acquired a lot of skills Grandma knew nothing about.

Take that driving a motor vehicle, for instance. The average housewife not only can drive a motor vehicle, but she spends so much of her time hauling her family around in good weather and bad, she should rate a professional chauffeur's license.

The questionnaire wants to know if she owns a car. Well, it's usually in Papa's name—but Mama keeps it all day.

Training in aviation is much less common, of course, but not because Mama isn't eager to know how to pilot a plane. It's just that, in the past, learning to fly has been an expensive proposition. But now that college girls are getting a chance at flying lessons, the number of women pilots in the country will increase quickly.

WILL PLAY A NEW ROLE

A great many women in the country are trained in dietetics. And a large number of them are not in paid jobs, but are using their training right now in their own homes. In addition to those trained in colleges, there are thousands of women who have put their minds to it and learned all about vitamins and balanced diets, just as part of the job of being a homemaker.

And look at the women who have never worked in an office in their lives who know how to type, in addition to the thousands of "white collar girls" who can make typewriters hum.

Yes, modern women have learned a variety of new skills as the need for some of the old ones has passed. They are ready to play an entirely new role in national defense, if they are needed. But they won't fall down in the old role of women in wartime, either.

They'll be just as capable of holding their homes together, managing on a little money and being the "man of the family" as any woman who ever lived. Maybe they'll be a little more capable—for today's women can get out and supplement the family income if they have to.

the next meeting Miss Arline Kimball will present a playlet.

Due to sickness among other chairmen there was no further business and after the singing of one verse of "America," the colors were retired and the meeting adjourned.

MIND YOUR MANNERS

Test your knowledge of correct social usage by answering the following questions, then checking against the authoritative answers below:

1. Should a high school girl comb her hair at the table in the school cafeteria?
  2. Is it good manners for guests at a large banquet to leave the table before every speaker has finished?
  3. Should a girl wear a dinner dress or a low-cut, sleeveless evening dress to a formal dinner?
  4. Should a young man consider the color of dress a girl will wear when he selects a corsage for her?
  5. How far ahead should a chaperon be asked to a dance?
- What would you do if—
You are a high school girl dressing for an informal dance in the evening—
(a) Wear a sweater and skirt with socks and saddle oxfords?
(b) Wear an afternoon-type dress shoes with heels, and silk stockings?

- Answers:
1. No. That is just as bad manners as it would be for her to comb her hair at a downtown restaurant table.
  2. No. It is very rude.
  3. A dinner dress is suitable.
  4. Yes.
  5. When the dance is planned or a little later. It is rude to wait until the last minute to ask a chaperon.
- Best "What Would You Do" solution—(b) High school students are old enough to dress appropriately for every occasion.
