to put the game in a tie at that erally effective with base point. This standoff was immediately shattered by a Yankee run off Johnny Babich in the sixth and blown apart for good on Keller's two-run circuit off Chalmer Harris in the seventh, which ended the scoring. Altogether, Keller knocked in four runs.

The Yanks went right to work on Mr. Babich, scoring four runs in the first three frames. The last of these was brought in by DiMag after he opened the third with his double His single arrived in the ninth but dia not figure in the scoring.

The actual deciding run, one that counted in the sixth, was produced on Bill Dickey's triple and Phil Rizzuto's single.
