SOLON PROPOSES RADIO OVERHAUL

Legislation Would Compel Stations to Give Equal Time in Debate

WASHINGTON, July 31.—(AP)—Senator White (R-Me) introduced today legislation to overhaul the present Federal Communications act. Among other things, the measure would require a radio station owner "to afford a right of reply where public officers, other than the President, use his station for the discussion of public or political questions."

"This right of reply is to be exercised by the accredited representatives of the opposition political party or parties," a statement by White said, "and is to be afforded upon the same terms and conditions as the original discussion."

Another provision of the new legislation would require all radio speakers on political questions—whether local, state or national—to be identified.

White said other provisions of the measure were "designed to curb an alleged tendency on the part of the Federal Communications commission to discriminate in a manner not authorized by the statute between applicants for broadcast and other radio facilities."

"An administrative tribunal . . . is not . . . authorized or permitted to set itself up as a general legislative body making its own rules of conduct and decision wholly apart from and beyond the language of the statute."

"The tendency to do this, prevalent among virtually all administrative tribunals, has recently become very aggravated at the commission."

"I believe," one dealer said, requesting that his name not be disclosed, "that the closing of a large number of stations will result in a considerable saving of gasoline, but I also think it will force most of us to dispense with some of our employees. For instance, we now have four men employed on a 3 to 11 p. m. shift. If we must close from 7 p. m. until 7 a. m., it naturally will be unnecessary to employ these men during the time the station is closed."

There was a dissenting opinion from C. A. Walters, of the Atlantic Refining company, regarding the possible saving of gasoline, although he agreed that the movement would result in unemployment.

"I do not think," Mr. Walters said, "that closing of the filling stations would result in any saving of gasoline. There is nothing to prevent a motorist from 'tanking up' before 7 o'clock at night. I really cannot see how it would be of any benefit, and I do know that it would result in unemployment."
