SURSUM CORDA

"LIFT UP YOUR HEARTS"
By Wallace I. Wolverton, Ph.D.
Chaplain
Officer Candidate School

The second Sunday in May has become firmly fixed in the secular calendar as Mother's Day. Let us be candid about the matter. For many it is more a day of penitence than of celebration. We become penitent for our lack of appreciation and hustle off a letter, a telegram or a present in an effort to make amends. It would be better, would it not, if we made it a day of celebration and thanks giving and went to the church on that day to give thanks to Almighty God for the mother who gave us birth? That would be better than sentimental outpourings which betray our neglect.

On a train some months ago a rather profane sergeant had been cleaning up a bit in the smoking compartment. He opened his suitcase and took out a jar of pickles which he proudly announced his mother had sent him. He offered us some, but as he began to pass the jar around he dropped it. There was real distress in his face as he surveyed the ruin on the compartment floor. We all offered our sympathy. Later that day an elderly man said to me, "I don't care how rough a man may be, if he thinks a lot of his mother there is good stuff in him."

Let us lift up our hearts and give thanks for good and faithful mothers.

PT BOAT HERO GETS RESTLESS

Ensign Akers 'Just Spoiling to Get At Those Japs Again'

LOS ANGELES, May 8.—(AP)—Ensign Anthony B. Akers, 27-year-old Texas-born daredevil hero of naval warfare in the Philippines, says he's "just spoiling to get at those Japs again."

The six-foot-two Akers, who rescued President Manuel Quezon at Manila Bay and took him to Mindanao, is a member of Lieut. John Bulkeley's torpedo boat squadron and a veteran of the epic delivery of Gen. Douglas MacArthur from Corregidor to a Flying Fortress rendezvous on Mindanao.

Akers, a graduate of the University of Texas, makes his home here with Clarence D. Hudson. Modest to the point of bashfulness, he told how he sank a 10,000-ton Jap tanker in Subic Bay.

"I guess that was my best job," he told newsmen. "We had information that several enemy ships were proceeding into Subic Bay. With another boat, I took up my position off the mouth of the bay. Our reconnaissance was wrong. I learned after waiting three hours without seeing anything.

"I didn't want the night to be a total loss so I proceeded into the bay, with motors muffled. I saw two ships, one just being docked. Through my glasses I made out that she was a 10,000-ton tanker. We crept to within 1,000 yards of her, fired one torpedo, waited five minutes, fired again, and saw the tanker go up in flames. Then we headed back to sea, blasting at the shore batteries as we went."

SURVIVORS SPEND 16 DAYS ON SEA

small to operate for any length of time without refueling from a mother ship or a land base.

When the raider surfaced, he said the undersea craft drew along side the captain's lifeboat while officers conversed with the captain, but Wells was unable to hear what was said.

Boats Separated
 The lifeboats became separated on the first night, and Wells' boat was forced to sail due south for five successive days because of heavy seas and strong winds. Then followed the five days of calm.

"We were swamped twice," the third mate reported, "once after we were in the boat four hours when caught in cross seas. The second time was two days later in tremendous seas. The air tanks saved us. The first time we were swamped the water was knee deep in the boat. All hands bailed for 20 minutes."

Crew members said they picked small crabs from drifting seaweed, but during the last seven days water rations were cut to two ounces a day. Several of the 12 were hospitalized for treatment of swollen feet and two were ill from drinking sea water.

TODAY and TOMORROW

BY WALTER LIPPMANN
Madagascar and the French

The question is whether the operation in Madagascar can be used by Laval to make France fight for Hitler. We know that he will use it if he can, since he is a doomed man when Hitler falls.

The question of Martinique, Guadeloupe and French Guiana in this hemisphere is one which we had better leave to the President and his advisers. They alone are in a position to judge the military significance of these territories, and if they have taken, as no doubt they have, all necessary precautions, there are strong reasons for not pushing them.

The strongest of all the reasons is that we must not ever seem to take action against French possessions, especially if it involves bloodshed, if the action is not clearly related to the war against the Axis. Obviously, Syria was vital to the defense of the Middle East. Obviously, Madagascar is vital to the global war. Obviously, North Africa and Dakar are important in the final decision. The same is true of New Caledonia, the Pacific, and of the Free French colonies in Africa. No Frenchman can have any rational doubt that operations in all these places are an integral part of the war, and the real test is, therefore, always whether the operations are successful.

But in the case of Martinique the relation to the war is not so self-evident, and, therefore, it is the part of wisdom to seek to avoid even the appearance of winning a cheap and inconsequential victory over weak French forces. It is, as may well be the case, the change agents should be cleared out of these French colonies in the Western Hemisphere, the diplomatic action should be as well prepared as the military operation.

Dr. Keever Speaks At Exchange Meeting

The Rev. Edward F. Keever was the featured speaker at yesterday's Exchange Club luncheon. He accorded words of praise to the Mothers' Day of America in particular for the courage and inspiration they furnish their sons, brothers and husbands in these crucial times. "Sunday is set aside as a special day for tribute to Mother but every day should be Mothers' Day," said the speaker.

E. R. Wilson, of Becker Coal and Builders Supply Co., was inducted into membership by past-president J. L. Allegood. The program was under the direction of R. A. Dunlea and Leo Sykes, president presided.

A Paul Burton introduced as his guest E. R. Wilson of the Virginia Railway.

Rationing Rules Relaxed To Hasten Release Of Cars

CHARLOTTE, May 8.—(AP)—Dr. Ralph Nugent, chief of the Office of Price Administration's automobile rationing section, told a gathering of automobile and truck dealers here today that rationing regulations were being liberalized to hasten the release of the remaining 468,000 new cars in the country to purchasers.

"We are not worried about the rate of rationing," Dr. Nugent told his audience. "Our country soon will be terribly short of automobiles, but we prefer shortage to waste."

The meeting was sponsored by the North Carolina Automobile Dealers association.
