CLINTON, June 15.—J. Manly Jones, local representative of the Siler City Mills, was unanimously elected commander of Leon L. Daughtry Post No. 22, American Legion, at the annual meeting of the unit held at the Community building Friday night.

J. Sebron Royal and L. A. Powell and J. Manly Jones were elected Post delegates to the 24th annual convention of the North Carolina department to be held at Asheville, N. C., June 22-23 while George R. Parker, A. S. Bethune and Norwood P. Parker were named alternates.

with military items now comprising more than half of total transfers.

Congress has authorized lend-lease assistance to a maximum in excess of $50,000,000.00. As of May 1, aid amounted to $3,673,000,000.00 in goods transferred, awaiting transfer or use, or in process of manufacture, and $824,000,000.00 in services, such as repairing British warships in this country, ferrying planes and erecting production facilities. Actual exports of lend-lease articles up to the end of May amounted to $2,601,000,000.00.

"Our reservoir of resources is now approaching flood stage," the President asserted in a letter transmitting the report to Congress. "The next step is for our military, industrial and shipping experts to direct its full force against the centers of enemy power."

The shipping shortage is the problem there, the report made clear, saying that available cargoes were in excess of available ships.

"These facts mean just one thing: Our citizens are going to have to make room for the newcomers. It is urged that they do so as a patriotic gesture. It is one of the best ways the public of Wilmington and New Hanover county can help the war effort. It is expected, of course, that spare rooms and apartments will be made available at reasonable rents.

"Help win the war by taking a lodger."

The committee reviewed the status of the recent lumber freeze order of the WPB and discussed the possibility that lumber can be sold to those seeking to remodel or convert existing dwellings into additional units. It authorized a study in this connection.

AXIS CONTINUING LIBYAN CAMPAIGN

of Tobruk is part of the German plan which aims at a descent into Egypt and a northeastern drive on the Mediterranean coast. Without possession of Tobruk as well as Benghazi, port which the Germans now hold, such an advance would be impossible.

Far to the north, German forces under General Fedor von Bock hurled themselves at Soviet lines in the first of two anticipated thrusts toward Stalingrad and the approaches to the Caucasus.

Four motored bombers bearing the Stars of the United States Air force were reported to have swept far behind the German lines in raids upon the Rumanian oil fields, chief source of Hitler's present fuel supply, in one phase of the American-British efforts to aid Russia.

The giant Ploesti fields were believed to have been targets of these bombers, some of which made forced landings in Turkey last week. These Rumanian refineries feed oil to the German armored divisions attacking in Russia, and telling blows against them would be of immense help to the Soviet defenders.

As the war raged the Middle East, with the United States playing an increasingly important role, military experts in London declared that a German blow through Turkey to supplement offensives already under way now was unlikely.

"There are no German troops massing on the Turkish frontier or in the Balkans," said one informant. "There is some evidence that Hitler contemplated this move but demands on his manpower and machines made it impossible."

But this source said, failure on the Russian front may yet force the Germans to attempt to move through Turkey.

"This would be a much more difficult operation than a year ago," he added, "for the Germans would encounter not only a re-equipped Turkish army but the British armies in Syria would come to Turkey's aid."

Experts here declared the present Nazi offensives lacked the precise timing of German campaigns of 1940 and 1941.

Russian Marshal Timoshenko's May offensive against Khar'kov was credited with upsetting Hitler's plan for simultaneous advances in Libya and the Ukraine.

A general offensive on Russia's southern front, dwarfing Timoshenko's efforts, is expected to strike across the Donets and Don rivers toward Stalingrad with the two main spearheads launched from Khar'kov and Taganrog, farther south on the sea of Azov.

These may be accompanied by a secondary thrust from the Kerch peninsula.

Although Sevastopol still has not been reduced, it was believed in London that Hitler dare not wait longer for its capture before opening his massive campaign. The beleaguered Black sea naval base was considered useless, however, as a base for a Russian attack on the German flank.

AIR ATTACKS ON INVADERS CONTINUE

nounced by the Navy last Friday when it was said that a small force had moved on to Attu, west-ernmost of the Aleutians group. The presence of enemy ships in Kiska harbor in the Rat group, further east, but still 855 nautical miles from the base at Dutch Harbor was also reported.

The heavy air attacks indicated by the extent of damage worked on the Japanese attacking force indicated to authorities here that the Army and Navy possibly were giving the enemy another of the beatings which since early March have frustrated his every attempt to strike against American outposts.

ENTERS NEW PHASE

Where the North American continent curves a long, bony finger of islands toward Russia and Japan the Pacific war has entered a new phase which may have an important bearing on any part Russia plays in the fight against the Axis partner in the Orient.

Strategists said today that the present situation is too full of "ifs" to permit any except the most tentative analysis and the qualified conclusion that, depending on what happens in the next five or six weeks, Japanese aims regarding Russia may prove to have been deeply involved.

For several weeks military experts here have been predicting that Japan would have to attack Russia. The prelude to such an action would logically be an attempt on Japan's part to sever the most direct supply route from the air-seas and aircraft factories of the United States to Russia's Siberian army.

The Japanese might assume on the basis of geography, that sooner or later bases in the North Pacific area would be used not only for moving materials to Russia but also for long range American bombing attacks on their homeland. An attempt to neutralize these bases would be a logical defense move on their part.

(Whether the American success in sinking one Jap cruiser and damaging seven other vessels has nipped such an attempt in the bud remains to be seen.)

Another consideration is the fact that having failed for three months to make any spectacular new territorial gains to report to their people at home the admirals and generals in Tokyo may be trying now for what they would regard as easy conquests to put through while they nurse their wounds from the Coral sea and Midway.

Future events it is believed here, may support any or all of these theories of the enemy's main objective. About the only certainty, experts say, is that further operations are to be expected in the north Pacific.

Authorities said that, taken by themselves the Japs' landing on Attu island in the Aleutians and their abortive move into Kiska Harbor could represent only an attempt to recoup their prestige somewhat by making an advance into the edge of the western hemisphere with slight risk of loss.

The experts emphasized that the Northern Pacific may be divided into three strategic areas:

(1) The outer Aleutians, lying between Dutch Harbor and Russian waters, (2) The inner Aleutians lying between Dutch Harbor and the mainland and (3) Alaska itself.

Just as in the mid-Pacific, the seriousness of the enemy's intentions can be disclosed only by the campaign he actually undertakes and locations of the points at which he actually strikes.

ROME CLAIMS BIG BRITISH SHIP LOSS

ers and 12 to 14 transports—was believed bound for Alexandria or Malta.

The biggest part already had been forced to turn back from the attempt to pass through the 100-mile wide passage between Sardinia and Sicily on one side and Russia to the other, Il Giornale D'Italia declared.

Italian official quarters said nothing concerning the second convoy, but informed sources said they believed it was west bound, from Suez or Alexandria.

From dawn to dusk yesterday, said a special communique, Italian torpedo planes, dive bombers, fighters and bombers swarmed in five different attacks upon the eastbound convoy.

Twenty Italian planes were lost and 15 planes which rose from the two defending carriers were shot down the Italians said.

The high command summed up the convoy's losses as follows: Sunk: Two cruisers, a destroyer, four other ships.

Badly damaged: A battleship, an aircraft carrier, two cruisers, a destroyer, four more ships.

At sunup Sunday, according to Il Giornale D'Italia, the first blow was delivered by torpedo planes, dive bombers, and bombers accompanied by fighters as the convoy drew opposite Sardinia and near Cape Teulada, midway between Philippeville and Cape Bon on the Tunisian coast.

Two more assaults were delivered, the paper related, and then the convoy came within range of Sicily whence two more attacks were made.

In the course of these attacks, said Il Giornale, the convoy suffered great damage and became confused and dispersed. The greater part turned back, and only a few light warships continued on the way.

It was this section, said the paper, upon which the Italians renewed their assaults this morning. Up to 4 p. m. the attack was said to be continuing.

The Italian papers published extra editions, claiming a great victory.

TREASURY PROPOSES NEW LEVY ON INCOME

en out in the past, or was invested in federal securities."

Presenting the proposal to the committee, Paul read a memorandum which said there could be no "equality of privilege" in the war effort "when some of our citizens are permitted to enjoy a luxurious standard of living while others are called upon to cut their living standards to a bare subsistence level."

"To implement the President's proposal," he continued, "the treasury now recommends the enactment of a 100 per cent war super-tax on that part of the net income after regular income tax which exceeds a personal exemption of $25,000."

That plan, Paul estimated would affect 11,000 single and married persons and would add $184,000,000 to the approximately $6,250,000,000 in new taxes the committee already has approved tentatively.

Under levies tentatively approved by the committee, a single person would have an income of about $50,000 to have over $25,000 left after payment of regular income taxes. To have more than $50,000 remaining after payment of regular taxes, a married couple would have to have a gross income of about $185,000.

Paul strongly recommended a number of safeguards to avoid circumvention of the proposed limitations on income. For example, for the super-tax purposes, gifts to children or other close relatives would not be recognized and the income from them would be taxed to the donors.

And there would be no tax exemptions for state and local securities as in the case of normal and surtaxes.

Paul also recommended a revised treatment for corporate inventories. Taxpayers, he said, should be permitted to establish temporary reserves for possible inventory losses, the reserves to be deductible in computing taxable income; similarly, in a year of declining prices, the taxpayer would be required to subtract from his reserve the approximate amount by which price deflation had reduced the value of his basic inventory during the year.

GERMAN ASSAULTS STOPPED BY REDS

of Nazi troops and supplies, and an enemy transport and a number of motorboats, presumably around Sevastopol.

On the Kalinin front northwest of Moscow, where sharp fighting on a local scale has been in progress for days, the Russians reported German tanks and infantry engaged positions held by a single Red army unit but were thrown back after losing four tanks and a large number of men killed and wounded. The communique indicated this local engagement took place Sunday.

The Black sea fleet, normally based on Sevastopol but now probably driven from that strongest of Crimean fortresses by the intensity of German bombers and artillery, was reported to have bladed great gaps in the massed ranks of attacking Axis troops in a barrage laid down on the siege lines.

(The Berlin radio said the Soviet fleet attempted to approach the western Crimean coast near Yevpatoriya in the attack "obviously intended to divert attention from Sevastopol.") German coastal artillery was said to have hit several warships, forcing the naval force to withdraw.

Latest unofficial reports placed the fleet's strength at one old battleship, the lone Russian aircraft carrier, and unspecified numbers of cruisers, destroyers, submarines and small craft.

The epic stand of Sevastopol—now in its seventh month of siege with its people and troops driven to mole-like existence in the catcombs ad underground fortresses—was pointed up by the Soviet press as "an example to the Red army and the Soviet people."

The Russian communique, however, ignored the battle for Sevastopol and polished off all the fighting with the familiar phrase: "No significant changes took place at the front."

The carnage around Khar'kov, however, was totaled in the communique as "2,850 men and much material" in two days. There the bitter old antagonists, Marshal Semion Timoshenko and Nazi field marshal Fedor von Bock, seemed to have fought their Ukraine armies into exhaustion for the second time this spring with neither making significant progress. Nineteen tanks and 11 planes were reported destroyed there overnight.

(The Germans, indeed, said through "military quarters" in Berlin that the Khar'kov battle had ended. The high command claimed 25,000 prisoners and the destruction of "remnants of the beaten enemy." Around Sevastopol, the Nazis claimed officially to have seized several positions.)

On the front west of Kalinin and northwest of Moscow, the Russians said two sharp German attacks were hurled back with 400 Nazis killed.

Another 1,355 were reported slaughtered by guerrillas in a five-day struggle about Leningrad. Murmansk, the Arctic supply port through which United States and British tanks, planes and other material are siphoned to the front, was attacked five times by German planes Sunday, but the Russians said there was no military damage.

(The German communique claimed successes in local attacks on the northern and central fronts and the repulse of Red attacks near Volkhov. A Soviet force was said to have been encircled and annihilated in Lapland.)

A battalion of German storm troops attempted to attack the Russians on the northwest front, the Soviet communique said.

"By a strong counterblow our men threw the enemy back," it added. "Many Germans were killed."

GERMANS ADVANCING

BERLIN, (From German Broadcasts), June 15.—The Trans-occean news agency reported tonight that German forces advancing east of Khar'kov "have crossed the Donets river at all important points."

This report, broadcast by the Berlin radio and attributed to "competent Berlin military quarters," followed a high command announcement that 25,000 prisoners had been taken in the battle east of Khar'kov and that "remnants of the beaten enemy" had been destroyed.

Military informants said the battle in that area to smash the Russians northern pincer now had ended.

In the battle for Sevastopol, the high command communique said the Russians had been thrown out of stubbornly defended positions before the Soviet Black sea naval base.

Military sources, quoted by DNB, said that Soviet warships attempted to approach the Crimean coast near Yevpatoriya, above Sevastopol, but that they suffered several hits in an artillery duel and were driven off.

The German communique said Soviet attacks had been repulsed in the Leningrad sector and south of Moscow while local Nazi assaults on the northern and central sectors were declared to have taken "a favorable turn."

of Commissioner Gardner after he explained that "I don't know of any three men giving more of their time than members of the ration board and they are working with only warm water to drink."

After receiving bids on cost of digging a well at the home of E. M. Meyland, the board on motion of Commissioner George W. Trask voted to give Mr. Meyland the money and let him attend to the matter. The motion provided that the county get a release for moving the house for Mr. Meyland and after he deeds the county his property the county will in turn deed him the property on which the house stands.

Agreement between Mr. Meyland and the board was reached when the county was acquiring property for location of a runway at the airport. The board agreed to move a house on property already owned by the county, which was not needed for the runway, and deed it to Mr. Meyland in return for his property which it wished to acquire.

Chairman Addison Hewlett explained that negotiations for property necessary for the final 1,000-foot extension of the north-south runway were progressing. He added that the board expected to acquire the property within a few days.

When the grand jury's recommendation that beer parlors, piccoloco places and similar establishments rated less than grade "B" be closed from 12 o'clock at night until 6 o'clock the following morning and on weekends was brought up, County Attorney Marsden Bellamy said the board did not have the authority to designate any closing hours.

The board voted to pay a special officer at Wrightsville Beach $125 per month from June 1 to Labor Day after Chief of Police W. E. Slingetery, Jr. reported that he had been unable to obtain an officer at $100 per month, paid in previous years. Similar action was taken in the case of the special officer at Carolina Beach at the previous meeting of the board.

Beer licenses were granted E. C. Baldwin, Castle Hayne; William McKay, Market Street road; R. L. Barkhill, Summer Hill, and Willie Williams, Sea Breeze.

The board voted to pay current bills on motion of Commissioner Gardner.
