Lots Of People Are Bringing On Rationing

BY RUTH MILLETT NEW YORK, June 16.—If nation-wide rationing of gas does have to be resorted to there are a lot of folks who will have the satisfaction of knowing that they asked for it.

There is the family of three which has kept two cars and a station wagon just as they did in the good old days.

There is the couple who started running the tires off their car the minute they first heard a hint that cars might be rationed by the government.

"We'll enjoy it," is their philosophy. Then there is the father who has let his college son keep his roadster, even though he has no use for it except for getting out to a beer joint and back, and to dances in the nearby towns.

There is also the family which is so dependent on doing things the easy, convenient way they haven't as yet made the acquaintance of the town's buses and street cars. They can't imagine having to do so.

Then there are the people who blame the government for the rubber shortage and so don't feel any responsibility for conserving the rubber in their possession. They are sure that if they do save their tires they'll eventually go to "some politician."

Those are the people who are asking for gas rationing on a nation-wide scale. They'll also be the ones who kick the loudest if they get it.

Skyways Become Training Ground For England's Girl 'Aero-Mecs'

By ROSETTE HARGROVE NEA Service Staff Writer

FROM A NORTH-WEST RAF STATION.—I spent the best part of a day recently with the first women W.A.A.F. flight mechanics who are now actually flying—and how they love it.

Right up until then, the girl "aero-mecs" of the Women's Auxiliary Air Force had helped take the engines of all types of aeroplanes to bits—from little training planes, called "kites," to bombers—but the authorities had withheld them permission to accompany the pilot on the final try-out. Now they are doing it and they just bristle with pride and satisfaction.

So far there are only around 18 of these W.A.A.F.'s who have passed the tests which enable them to go up in the planes, but hundreds of them on every aerodrome in England are going through the course and pretty soon more and more men will be released for actual fighting as these girls graduate to take their places.

Of the first twelve we followed on their maiden flight, not one had had previous airplane or flying experience. One was formerly a dressmaker, another a shop assistant, a third a typist. They came from all parts of the country—London, the Midlands, Wales—one good-looking brunette hied from Toronto (Canada) and the prettiest of the lot, an 18-year-old Scotch lassie, had come straight from school. Their ages ranged from 18 to 28; they all bubbled over with health, vitality and enthusiasm.

"It did seem a bit hard at first" admitted Jean, the Glasgow girl, "but we soon got used to the new life. The team spirit is extraordinary—you never meet anything like that outside the services."

"Our billets are comfortable and we get plenty of good food. There is a movie show twice a week, and with all kinds of games, both indoors and outdoors, how can we do anything else but keep fit?"

When we arrived at the station four training planes were on the runway. They had been okayed by the first women to sign for them. Along came the four star gals mechanics with their flying gear. One of their team helped them adjust their parachutes.

It was a thrilling moment when the four machines took off, roaring up into the sky, with the girls in the observers' seats. The R.A.F. pilots did a few acrobatics, not just to show off, but in real earnest to test the plane at all angles.

"Now we realize more than ever how much depends on our accuracy and attention to the minutest detail" said one of the girls when each of the planes had made a perfect landing. "Now, too, I understand something of the function and working of the dials on the instrument board."

Then, spontaneously: "I wouldn't change jobs with anybody. I am crazy about flying now."

The engineer officer in charge of the training course for girl flying mechanics praises them to the skies.

"They are utterly dependable and so tremendously conscientious," he declared. "Nothing is too much trouble and they are extremely docile pupils. Some, of course, are quicker to grasp certain elements than others, but on the average they are every bit as capable of turning out a good time, endurance and courage, they take a lot of beating."

Neither the exhaustive tests, the hard work or the relatively long training will deter them. For, to all these Englishwomen, this is just another way of beating Hitler.

Try Making Mayonnaise 'A la China'

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX NEA Service Staff Writer

GIVE vegetables in summer dishes and salads variety by using mayonnaise occasionally. Here are some recipes to help:

Chinese Mayonnaise (makes 1 1/2 cups) Combine 1 cup real mayonnaise with 4 teaspoons soy sauce, 1 teaspoon grated onion, 1-8 teaspoon tabasco sauce, and 1-8 teaspoon black pepper. Store in a jar in refrigerator and use as needed.

Stuffed Baked Tomatoes (serves 6) Six medium tomatoes, 1-4 cup toasted bread crumbs, 1-4 cup diced cheese, 1 cup cooked lima beans, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon tabasco sauce, and 1-8 teasmargarine, melted, real mayonnaise.

Cut thin slices from stem end of tomato. Scoop out center with a spoon, leaving walls at least 1-4 inch thick. Chop tomato centers and combine with bread crumbs, cheese, lima beans, salt, pepper and vitaminized margarine, tossing lightly to mix well. Stuff mixture into tomatoes, heaping up generously. Top each tomato with a teaspoon of real mayonnaise. Place in a buttered shallow baking pan. Bake in moderately slow oven (325 deg. F.) for 20 minutes. Serve hot.

Savory Mayonnaise (makes 1 1/2 cups) Combine 1 cup mayonnaise with 2 tablespoons mustard. Add 2 teaspoons prepared horseradish, 4 teaspoons finely chopped chives, a dash of salt and pepper, mixing well. Store in covered jar until needed.

TOMORROW'S MENU BREAKFAST: strawberries and cream, corn flakes, toast, coffee, milk.

LUNCHEON: Stuffed baked tomatoes, enriched rolls, fruit bowl, tea, milk.

DINNER: Panbattered round steak, lemon butter, mashed potatoes, new carrots, rhubarb pie, coffee, milk.
