Powder Puff Cavalry Corps

CHARGE! Denver's all-girl cavalry thrills to the stirring command.

By ROBERT GEIGER Wide World Features

DENVER, June 17.—The bugle call, "Boots and Saddles," that summons the U. S. cavalry to gallant rides, now takes on an added line:

"Boots and saddles — and powder puffs, if you please!" Sure, the gals have their own army. Now they're up to cavalry tricks. And not on hobby horses, either.

These soldiers have nothing to do with the WAAC. They are members of a civilian defense project, called Cavalry Corps and guaranteed to condition its girls to take the toughest knocks the war can hand them.

Its captain, Mrs. Blink Gray, explains its purpose: "This is a junior project of the American women's Voluntary Services, for girls from 15 to 25. Any girl of this age is eligible to join."

"The girls all will be equipped with horses and will learn cavalry drills."

"They will have training in first aid, practical veterinary work care and training of horses and practical nursing."

"They will be subject to call in time of an emergency, for duty in first aid—as couriers in civilian defense; or as a mounted patrol in any civilian emergency, such as a flood."

"We propose to train these girls until they are in top physical condition and equal to any emergency. That is the main purpose of the Corps. Training in leadership and the development of resourcefulness and initiative will be stressed.

"It's no sissy society stunt and if you want the proof just come out some day and watch."

We did. We saw: Girls, like veteran cavalrymen but minus the picturesque speech—come charging in formation down steep cliffs along nearby Cherry Creek.

Taking instruction in patching up a broken horse.

Give Soldier Boys Sauces And Gravies

ATLANTA, Ga., June 17.—The boys who do the fighting for Uncle Sam have very definite ideas as to what they like to eat and how they like it dressed up, so the Quartermaster dietitian experts who prepare the menus see that they get what they want, according to Col. William F. Ritter, Acting Fourth Corps Area Quartermaster.

As an example, experience has proved that there are two classes of delicacies that the soldiers demand and it's a sad day for the Army cook if they don't get them. These are gravies and sauces on their meats and fish.

For instance, what would roast lamb be without brown gravy? What would fish cakes be without tomato sauce? Or take the sad case of the veal cutlet that was served to the hungry soldier without tomato catsup. Likewise, whoever heard of a fried oyster without tartar sauce, or a baked haddock without lemon butter?

Particularly popular is braised beef cooked with a delicious barbecue sauce. The same sauce does wonders for the well-liked frankfurter.

So, the Army cooks follow the menus and the troops in the mess halls to camps in the southeastern states, get what they want—or else.

Mrs. Gabriel Heatter, wife of the radio news analyst, collaborated with her plumber in building a bomb shelter in her Freeport, Long Island, home without benefit of architect. Mrs. Heatter used 3,000 bricks in the ceiling, which is supported by steel posts. The room has windows and doors of non-shatterable glass and is equipped with studio couches, chairs, a ping pong table, dishes, canned goods, bottles of spring water and an alcohol stove.

Frances M. Giden of the Bronx, crippled by spastic paralysis, has received the $500 annual award which the Men's League in Aid of Crippled Children presents annually to the crippled student who has done the most to overcome a handicap. Frances entered school at 9, was graduated from Hunter College 10 years later and now is a student in the Fordham University Law School. She writes articles and rides a bicycle.

Anybody stewing over her summer wardrobe can consider the plight of Englishwomen. They received 66 clothing coupons last year, now are cut to 51. The coupons will buy a winter coat, a winter dress, a pair of shoes, a nightdress, a set of underwear, two pairs of stockings and four handkerchiefs. Or an evening wrap, three dresses with shoes to match and a bathing suit. Not all the year's coupons can be squandered at once. Only 20 can be spent before Oct. 12.

her famous husband, Edward's activities along that line were confined to "selling the empire" by his personality and charm during his Prince of Wales days. But the Duchess let it be known that she wanted department store representatives to see the necklaces, brooches and earrings made of jade, coral and turquoise-tinted shells which she brought with her. (The ebb in tourist travel has caused a marked decrease in their sale in the Bahamas.)

There is nothing on record of orders placed, but the Duchess' action is decidedly interesting in the light of her position and her reputation for chic. In the absence of the Duke, who was called back to Nassau by labor trouble, the Duchess devoted a good part of her New York visit to the hairdresser, dressmaker, dentist, and shopping for her Nassau canteen.

Anne Morgan, head of the Coordinating Council of French Relief Societies, has organized a sculpture and photograph exhibit for aid of French war prisoners. The display, which features 80 pieces of Malvi a Hoffman's sculpture, will continue for the next three months at the council's Madison Avenue Headquarters in New York. Besides her sculpture Miss Hoffman has contributed to the exhibit a huge map of the world, which is surrounded by life-sized photographs portraying the races of man. Pictures were taken by Adolf Fassbender, Florence Conrad, Trade

Uncle Sam Needs Many More Nurses

The American Nurses Association, the National League of Nursing and the National Organization for Public Health are participating in a recruiting program for nurses for the armed forces and also in a program to interest students in taking training.

The nation's nursing needs are made clear when it is considered that the Army needs six nurses for every 1,000 men and the Navy needs three nurses for every 1,000 men. For example, the increased Army of 7,000,000 will require 42,000 nurses which is more than four times the number now in service.

An act of Congress gives the responsibility of maintaining a First Reserve of nurses for war duty to the American Red Cross. Single registered graduates of approved nursing schools between the ages of 21 to 40 are acceptable for First Reserve.

District No. 9 of the N. C. Nursing association, Wilmington, has been assigned a quota of 50 First Reserve Red Cross Nurses to be enrolled by Sept. 1, 1941.

All nurses in district nine of the association who meet the requirements are urged to write Miss Minnie B. Bailey, 1700 Arlington street, Raleigh.

It is a proud heritage for any American woman to have such a recognized part in this supreme struggle for freedom.
