

4,000 LANDLORDS REGISTER HOUSING

Registration Of Units Here Is Believed Only One-Fourth Completed

More than 4,000 landlords registered their rented dwellings in the first week of property listing in New Hanover county under the Maximum Rent regulations, the Area Rent Director said Saturday.

The registration represented approximately 50 per cent of the dwelling units other than public housing in Wilmington, George Jeffrey, Area Rent Director, said. There are 8,000 dwelling units in the city as reported by a WPA survey.

Due to the fact that there are many persons who rent to one or two tenants (not more than two) who are also covered under this regulation, it is estimated the registration is only one-fourth completed.

Since landlords have only until July 1 to register their property, it is urged that they secure forms immediately.

Area rent officials commented favorably on the attitude of landlords in general and it was stated that considering the number of registrations the complaints were very few.

It was pointed out that many landlords may not be aware of the fact that this regulation applies to all landlords and not just to those who rented their property since April 1, 1941. It is necessary to register property even though the tenant may have lived in the house 10 or 15 years. Also, tenants who sub-rent property in turn become landlords and they must register as landlords for property which they sub-let.

Every effort will be made by the Area Rent office to have landlord's statements returned to them by July 1, it was stated. This means further that the tenants statement will be mailed to him at about the same time. The statement will show the maximum legal rent which may be charged for property. None have been mailed as yet.

HITLER'S WORST YEAR

WAR has ravaged Russia for 12 long months since the day in June, 1941, when Hitler sent his armies surging across Soviet borders. In the first three months, the Germans made their greatest gains, coming within 200 miles of Moscow, capturing half of the Ukraine. In the second three, Russian attack and cold of winter began driving the Nazis back from their peak of penetration. Through the third three months, German troops held on to key points along the 2000-mile front although Soviet soldiers regained about 1/5 of territory lost. During the last three months the war remained in stalemated state until mid-May when Hitler resumed the offensive at Kerch, Kharkov, Sevastopol and Leningrad, although making no spectacular gains by mid-June.

After one year in Russia, Hitler holds only 1-25 of the total area of the Soviet Union and has lost millions of men, their war machines and equipment. Map spots attacks and battles in this costly campaign begun June 22, 1941.

Sunday School Lesson

BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D. Editor of Advance
Text: Matthew 28:16-20; Mark 16:7-20; Luke 24:49-53

It is not easy for us to grasp the full significance of what is often called the Great Commission, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature."

We do not know the exact date at which these words in the Gospel of Mark were written, but it was near the time of the very beginning of Christianity. We live in a world so accustomed to Christian institutions and so aware of the spread of Christianity to almost every part of the world that it is almost impossible for us to visualize the conditions under which these words were written.

The events that have become the most important in all history for us were then unknown or unimportant to the greater part of that ancient world. Christians were comparatively few, and were for the most part either despised or persecuted. The growth of the early church was remarkable immediately following the fulfillment of the commission that Jesus gave to His 11 faithful apostles and the missionary labors of St. Paul and his associates, but even this remarkable growth was small in comparison with the vast number who had never heard of Christ. The religion of the Galilean seemed feeble and unimportant, with its groups meeting in homes, or in lonely outdoor places, or even in the hidden catacombs, in comparison with the elaborate temples of Grecian and Roman cities and the official and popular religions that they represented.

Yet, one must attempt to reproduce something of that picture to grasp in any way a conception of the true nature of Christianity and the largeness, boldness, and courage of Christian faith in its day. As that the Gospel it professed could be a boon to all mankind, and that its power and blessings could be preached to every creature. Surely, human faith and vision never dared elsewhere to contemplate anything so stupendous! The Christian enterprise, thus initiated in the very beginnings, leaves one breathless in consideration of its immensity, even in comparison with the ambitious plans of those who have sought to bring all the world under their domain by military conquest.

The world of today seems in some measure to mock the grandeur of that faith as we see what have been professedly Christian nations in deadly combat, and practically the whole world involved in war and violence, with the disruption of such missionary enterprise and the entire withdrawal of our Christian missionaries from certain areas whether they had hitherto achieved much progress. But we must not be discouraged and we must guard against seeing world events in the false perspective of despair. As the boundaries of the world have enlarged and progress has developed, the powers of evil have increased along with the powers of good. The present crisis is wider, and perhaps deeper, but it is inherently no different from successive crises in which powers of anti-Christ have sought unsuccessfully to overthrow the Christian Church and undo all that has been accomplished in the name of the Master.

The promise of God is still to the faithful, and it is as true today as it was in the dark hours when Jesus proclaimed it that the triumph of the Gospel is sure. When the world passes out of this period of hate and violence, there will still be human needs with the power of the Gospel to meet them. We are more than ever aware that it is only the Christ who can satisfy the needs and longings of mankind, and it is true, as in the ancient day, "By of good cheer; I have overcome the world." Note also, that the world that Jesus said He had overcome was a world of trial and tribulation, not unlike the world in which we are now living.
