$5,000 FHA LOANS ARE OFFERED HERE

Money To Be Used To Provide Additional Accommodations For War Workers

FHA-Plan loans up to $5,000 are now available for converting homes here into additional living accommodations suitable for war workers, officials of the defense housing committee of the New Hanover defense council said yesterday morning.

The loans may be made for a term as long as seven years. "Some examples of the work that can be done with this type of loan are to add several rooms suitable for rooming or housekeeping purposes to an existing house; remodeling an attic or a second story into an apartment; or converting a structure which is not now a dwelling into a one or multi-family home," officials said.

Loans for war conversion purposes are exempt from the Federal Reserve Board's regulation on consumer credit and can be approved by the state FHA office in Greensboro instead of having to be submitted to Washington.

Application blanks for the new loans can be obtained from the Greater Wilmington chamber of commerce offices on Front street. "Here is an opportunity to enlarge your present home and, at the same time, be of assistance to the war effort by helping to house war workers here," the officials of the defense housing committee declared.

"The defense housing committee urges every home owner or property owner to consider this means of aiding the war effort."

PAY INCREASE

The recent pay increase for soldiers is retroactive to June 1. In order that troops may get this before the end of July the Camp Davis Finance office is making a change in its routine. Instead of paying all units at one fell swoop, each unit will be paid as soon after the end of June as it can fill out its payroll. The order of payment will be first come first served.

PAY DEDUCTION

Because so many army men have asked for pay roll deductions to buy war bonds, the War Department announces that there may be as much as three months' delay in mailing out certificates of purchase or the bonds themselves to the owners. Interest will start with the date of purchase.

MESS HALL TROUBLE

A story from Hq. Btry., 1st Bn., 514th: "Our cooks have been changing so rapidly that the other day one left during the preparation of a meal. He neglected to tell the new cook coming on that he, the old cook, had salted the potatoes, so that the new cook coming on wouldn't have to salt them after the old cook had left. "Now the new cook is blaming the old cook for not telling him, the new cook, that he, the old cook, had already salted the potatoes. Aw spuds."

ADD MESS HALL

Here's a conversation reported from the same battery, which seems to have its mind on mess halls: A sergeant was giving a tongue-lashing to the dining room orderly for doing something a corporal told him to do that he should have known was wrong. "What would you do," blazed the sergeant, "if I told you to stick your head in that pan of hot, soapy water?" "Oh well," replied the orderly seriously, "I'd tell a table waiter to do it."

Veteran Of First World War Serving Again At Camp Davis

A first lieutenant in Camp Davis has just been promoted to captain, but it is no ordinary promotion. The new captain held that rank in the last war.

Capt. Vincent P. Rousseau, Infantry, holder of the Purple Heart and veteran of the Aisne-Marne and Oise-Aisne campaigns, served as a captain through most of World War I.

Called back to active service from the retired list over a year ago as first lieutenant, Captain Rousseau has at last been promoted to his former rank. He was first commissioned by examination from civil life in June 1917 and by August of that year held the temporary rank of captain with the 39th Infantry of the 4th Division. That was his outfit throughout his service in France.

The division moved overseas in April, 1918, holding reserve positions until the day before the German attack at Chateau-Thierry. When that attack came the Fourth had occupied a sector immediately adjacent to the Marne push. Capt. Rousseau went forward with his unit in the counterattack, serving for a while as acting battalion commander. But in the Soissons-Rheims sector, to which the American troops had carried their advance, he was severely wounded.

The action occurred at the approaches of the little town of Fismes. Captain Rousseau was in a group bombed by five German bombers, an incident not as frequent then as in the present war. That bombing came close to putting the captain permanently out of action. As a result he spent two and a half years in army hospitals. He also received, later, the Purple Heart, oldest army decoration.

Captain Rousseau was on the retired list during the years of peace because of his disability. An act of 1930 made him a captain of his rank in the last war.

When called into active service again in March, 1941, the former captain was only a first lieutenant. He lacked four days of need the higher rank. As a lieutenant esay time of service to get he had served at Camp Davis as provost marshal and, more recently, assistant intelligence officer.

Special 'Arrival Card' Is Prepared By Army

The War Department has devised a special "arrival card" designed to give prompt information to parents, relatives and friends of the safe arrival of military personnel overseas.

Cards for every individual who sails will be filled out with all pertinent data, including the overseas mail and cable address, and addressed to persons for whom they are intended. When troops sail the cards will be left with commanding officer of the port of embarkation for mailing as soon as the troops reach their destination.

Three cards will be supplied for each individual sailing. One of these cards will be addressed to the person to be notified in emergency. The other two may be filled out and addressed by the individual.

Thus, parents and friends of all military personnel arriving overseas will receive notification in the shortest possible time.

MANY VOLUNTEER BLOOD AT DAVIS

Men At Post Rush To Help Twin Daughters Of Civilian Employee At Camp

A notice in the Camp Davis daily bulletins requesting blood donors for the twin babies of a former soldier brought in so many volunteers that they stopped counting them.

More than twenty officers, non-coms and privates were recorded at the camp chaplain's office, and unrecorded offers are still coming in.

The babies, at present in a hospital in Wilmington, are Alma Kay and Nancy Fay, twin daughters of James R. Griffin, civilian employe at the camp. He was formerly a soldier stationed here.

Griffin's family has been in the hospital for some time. The transfusions are required to bring the infants' strength up to a point where they can safely leave the institution. The first two soldiers to volunteer who had the right type of blood were chosen. They donated their blood Saturday afternoon. They specified that the gift be anonymous.

Local Museum Of Art Will Close Tuesday

The Wilmington WPA Museum of Art will close its doors Tuesday. Until that time, the exhibition of paintings by Wilmington artists will be on display.

During the month they have been on view, a large number of visitors have looked them over, local people, service men, and travellers. Comments on the work have been most appreciative, and in some instances enthusiastic, officials said.

The director of the museum requests that all artists having pictures there call for them Tuesday, between the hours of 9 a. m. and 6 p. m., as everything must be removed on that day preparatory to closing.

BAPTISM BY FIRE

NOTHING can adequately take the place of experience, whether it be fighting a war or settling an estate. The same principles apply. Theory, instruction, study—all are of great importance. But the actual combat changes the rookie into the seasoned campaigner. We attach much significance to our repeated experience serving as Executor. We would like to explain how this experience can be of benefit to your family.
