MORE OPA PRICE ACTIONS SLATED

Many Case Remain To Be Heard Before Special Commissioner

Public hearings before Chief Hearing Commissioner Daniel L. Bell, of Atlanta, ended here Saturday morning with six cases on OPA price ceilings and rationing violations being settled by consent orders signed by Bell.

With the end of the present hearing commissioner's term in Wilmington, Frank P. Spruill, Jr., Raleigh district OPA attorney, said that 34 cases of OPA violations had been heard or consented to during the week. Other cases, possibly numbering 35, will be drawn and scheduled for a later date, possibly beginning on Monday, Nov. 29.

The latter group of cases, Spruill said, are from investigations made during the week by OPA staff men in Wilmington, Wrightsville Beach and Carolina Beach. It was not possible to schedule them for hearings this week, he said, because the calendar had been filled with cases drawn following investigations made during the first four days of the price ceiling enforcement drive in Wilmington.

The largest group of cases heard during the week-long session here came from the City Market where meat price, point-value posting, and price posting violations were found. Saturday morning, Spruill personally visited the City Market and after an extensive survey commented that "the City Market was today in the best shape ever as far as price posting and conforming to rationing regulations is concerned. Now the public can know exactly what to expect when it purchases rationed meats with a moment's glance at the prices and point-value charts. The farmers and sellers showed fine cooperation and understanding of the purpose of the entire price ceiling and rationing program by their up-to-the-minute postings today."

Chief Investigator Albert A. Corbett was also well pleased with the showing the City Market made Saturday morning.

Following the close of the hearings Saturday morning, Spruill announced that six cases had been settled by consent. The orders were drawn and signed by Hearing Commissioner Bell.

Settlements on the various OPA violation charges in the six cases were made as follows:

G. B. Smith, Southside Grocery, 620 Meares street, agreed to a 90-day suspension, sixty days suspended, on 20 counts of price ceiling and rationing violations. The store is prohibited from selling rationed meats and processed foods for a period of 30 days, beginning November 22.

A. C. Shipman, Shipman Grocery Company, 821 Grace street, agreed to a 60-day suspension period, fifty-five days suspended on probation, and five days active beginning on December 6. During the five days Shipman is prohibited from buying, selling, or delivering rationed meats and fats under Ration Order No. 18.

W. F. Griffin and L. H. Porter, doing business as Trailer Camp City Grocery, was given a suspended suspension for a period of 30 days.

L. E. Hagood, Hagood's Grocery, 320 Nun street, agreed to a 90-day suspension order with 30 days active beginning December 27. The case involved 15 counts on price and rationing violation and during the 30-day period Hagood is prohibited from buying, selling,
