Course In Child Psychology Recommended For Dads, Too

BY RUTH MILLETT
In Washington, D. C., the health department is setting up a school for expectant fathers.

Wouldn't it be a good idea if servicemen who are fathers were offered—during their "waiting" periods when time hangs heavy on their hands—a course on child psychology, especially slanted to prepare them to meet their offspring when they return home?

Wife after wife confides that when her husband returned on leave or for duty in the states after a year or two of foreign service, his children were complete strangers to him. He didn't know what to expect of them at their present ages. He didn't make allowances for the fact that the children, in his absence, had suffered from being moved around, from the insecurity of having a father snatched away, etc.

One wife said her husband couldn't seem to understand at first, when he returned after a two-year absence, that there was a child in the family to be considered. He had been free of family responsibilities for so long he found it difficult to remember that going out in the evening involved getting the baby fed early, hiring a baby sitter, etc.

Other wives have found that their husbands believe they have spoiled the children, not realizing that it is difficult for a mother to handle all questions exactly as she would if she had a husband's suggestions to help her.

And fathers who wanted "Mary and the kids to go home to Mother and Dad for the duration" are shocked to learn that too much attention and too many bosses have been hard on the kids.

The fathers of children who have reached adolescence in their absence are probably the most bewildered of any, when they come home to find that their easily manageable kids have turned into problem adolescents with minds and wills of their own.

So it looks as though one of the greatest educational aids that the Army and Navy could offer fathers in service would be a really good course in child psychology, so that their kids won't be such complete strangers to their Dads when they come home on leave or to stay.

Sugarless Dessert

- Potatoes stuffed with Finnan Haddie
- Fresh Peas
- Toasted Hard Rolls
- Honey Pumpkin Tarts (Recipes Serve Four)
- Potatoes Stuffed With Finnan Haddie

- 1 fillet of finnan haddie
- 1 cup milk
- 4 baked potatoes
- 1 egg, well beaten
- 1-4 cup hot milk
- Dash of pepper

Place fish in flat pan and cover with milk. Soak for one hour and bring slowly to boiling point. Simmer 15 minutes. Drain and flake fish, removing skin and bones. Remove the top from the baked potatoes and scoop out the pulp and put through ricer. Combine potatoe, fish, egg, hot milk and pepper and mix thoroughly. Pile mixture in potato shells and bake at 425 degrees until tops are brown and mixture is heated through.

Honey Pumpkin Tarts

- 1-2 cups cooked sieved pumpkin
- 1-2 cup milk
- 3-4 cup honey
- 1-2 teaspoon salt
- 1-2 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1-2 teaspoon ginger
- 1 tablespoon gelatin
- 1-4 cup cold water
- 1-2 cup chopped black walnut meats
- 4 tart shells, baked

Soften gelatin in cold water for five minutes. Combine all other ingredients except nuts and heat over boiling water. Add softened gelatin and stir until gelatin is dissolved. Stir in nuts and fill shells. Chill until firm.

Daily Care For Furs

BY VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Fur coat care shouldn't be limited to summer storage. Your coat needs day to day care to insure long life and fewer repair jobs.

Be sure never to sit on your coat. A careful woman should remove her coat and hang it on the back of her chair.

When indoors throw your coat over your shoulders, as perspiration is very harmful to fur.

To keep dust from working into the fur and flattening it out, shake your coat out after every wearing.

If you get caught in the rain, don't rub fur with the hands. Shake it out briskly and hang it up to dry on a closet pole where the coat is sure not to touch anything else and it not near heat.

Don't stroke furs like beaver, nutria or Alaska sealskin, as moisture on the hands will stick to fur and mat it.

Spray, don't dab, perfume on a stopper on your furs. If you don't have an atomizer, put the perfume on the shoulder pads inside the lining.

If you spill food, liquor or anything on your coat don't try to clean it. Take it to your furrier to be cleaned.

Since the worst spots for wear on a coat are the back of the neck and the edge of the waistline, a scarf should be worn inside the coat and have proper fastenings so you don't clutch it together.

Whenever possible use a purse with a handle, since one that is carried under the arm will cause wear.

In the 15th century all Greek actors wore masks which acted as sounding-boards and carried dialogue to the farthest reaches of vast civic arenas.
