He's No Mudder

Slung in a novel harness that keeps his paws above the muddy ground, this division mascot is being carried by his master, First Sgt. Roger Keith, Brockton, Mass., on the western front. Sling enables gear-laden Yanks to carry the dog more easily.

V-Bomb Attack Fails To Interrupt Wedding At Church In England

LONDON, March 18—(AP)—A V-bomb struck between a Catholic church and a school used as a rest center somewhere in southern England, killing two adults, a month-old baby, and injured several priests and a nun — but a scheduled wedding went on just the same.

Part of the playground equipment was hurled to the school roof. The Presbytery lost its roof and fire broke out. Doctors crawled over smoking debris to attend the injured. Alsatian dogs were used to find victims.

The roof of the church itself was ripped full of holes. Its interior strewn with wreckage. Only half the altar left standing, and the organ blew out entirely.

But the wedding was performed in the shell of the church and under the open sky.

FIFTH REPULSES ENEMY PATROLS

ROME, March 18. —(U.P.)— Three aggressive enemy patrols in the Vergato sector have been repulsed by Fifth U. S. Army units, it was reported today, as Allied warplanes for the 13th consecutive day pounded German supply lines in the Brenner Pass.

During one assault on an American-held hamlet, some Germans demanded in fluent English that the Yanks surrender. After 20 minutes of sharp fighting, the Germans were beaten off.

Italian troops attached to the British Eighth Army killed 20 German parachutists, wounded 15 and captured 10 others during a skirmish in the Fruili sector to the east. The Italians, supported by artillery, then captured several buildings. Allied warplanes bombed enemy artillery on the north bank of the Seenio river.

Medium bombers of the 15th Air Force yesterday pounded rail lines and bridges on the southern part of the Brenner supply route. Other communications lines in the Po valley were attacked. Lock gates in the Tagliamento estuary were hit by coastal air force planes. Warplanes also attacked railway sidings and rolling stock in Yugoslavia and gun positions on Rab island in the southern Adriatic.

He Says The Bridge Guardian Was Drunk

S/Sgt. Joseph De Lisio (above) of the Bronx, N. Y., says he captured the German lieutenant who had been assigned to blow hp the Ludendorff bridge at Remagen, Germany—and found him to be drunk. Some thought the lieutenant's soused condition might have figured in failure of dynamite on the bridge to explode and wreck it when he gave the signal for the blast. Shirtly afterwards, First Army troops poured across.
