Sunday School Lesson

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.
We are dealing in this lesson with the time in the life of Israel when, as we are told (Judges 21:25), "there was no king in those days; every man did what was right in his own eyes."
It ought to have been an ideal state, for what could be sounder and better than a democracy in which every man did right? However, what is right in man's eyes does not always conform to what is right in God's eyes; and there was a great deal wrong in Israel, as the records show. The Bible, with its great realism, suppresses nothing; and there is much that makes sad and unpleasant reading.
It is not pleasant, either in the twentieth century or in the records of ancient times, to read of the people of a whole community being slaughtered, even the women and children, and the pregnant women (see Judges 21: 10, 11). It isn't pleasant to read of dancing women being raided and carried off for wives, though the women may not have objected. There is much that is crude and bloody in these stories of settlement and struggle in Canaan, as there has been much of savagery in all tribal and frontier warfare.
We might well turn in revulsion, if this were all; but the significance of the records is that, despite the war-like and cruel times, there was so much of good, and of faith, and of courage, and devotion to the common good.
Great figures stand out from the dark background — Moses, of course, who led his people to the borders of the Promised Land, but did not go in; Joshua, Caleb, Gideon, even Samson with his gaudy spirit and his enormous strength, and perhaps above all Deborah, the noble woman who judged Israel, strong in her good judgment, her courage, and the force of character that made her the self-appointed leader and servant of her people.
The perils to which the Israelites, regaining a place in their homeland on their return from bondage in Egypt, were subject were not all physical. There was the constant peril to the moral and social life from contamination with the surrounding peoples and their idolatrous practices. Underlying the elaborate provisions of the Mosaic Code was the purpose to protect the health, the physical well-being, and the moral foundations of the home and community.
Much that seems according to our standards ruthless and cruel was, rightly or wrongly, in the nature of measures to prevent the moral submergence of Israel under the threat of idolatry. It is a poor business to defend brutality; but there are times and situations that call for stern and uncompromising measures. What lives and communities would have been saved, if the peaceful nations had had the vision, and the boldness, and the uncompromising firmness to act when the Japanese invaded Manchuria and the Germans began their aggression.
There is in our country today a namby - pamby tolerance of wrong, a compromise with evils, that may well wreck this nation unless a new spirit of righteous firmness guides our action in protecting society and in seeking its moral betterment and welfare.
The YMCA in Chicago has 24 departments, 13 summer camps, and 75,000 members. It is believed to be the largest "Y" in the world.

WARNING ISSUED ON FUEL ORDERS

Solid fuel users in Wilmington were urged today by OPA officials to speed up the filing of consumer declarations and to order fuel immediately if they hoped to avoid the risk of cold homes next winter.
M. L. Burtless, area distribution manager for the Solid Fuels Administration for War at Charlotte, issued this advice after receiving reports that slow public response in filing properly signed consumer declarations and in placing orders for fuel is threatening curtailment of the community's fuel supply next winter.
"If coal backs up in dealers' yards because consumers fail to file properly signed declarations and put off ordering their fuel now, dealers may have to refuse shipments later on if they are refused now. Thus, dealers who are forced to pass up opportunities to get fuel now, because consumers have not filed declarations and placed orders with them, may not be able to provide all of their customers with their full 80 per cent quota of fuel next winter."
"Defeat of Germany will not end the fuel shortage. We still have a long, hard job to beat the Japs, and both mines and retail dealers will continue to be short of manpower to supply fuel."
The public's best chance to keep warm next winter is to order fuel now and for each user, within the limit of his ability, to store his fair share of whatever kind of fuel his dealer recommends.
"Persons who delay doing this not only will risk being unable to get their full wartime quota next winter, but may get caught by last minute jams in deliveries and run into difficulties in getting fuel when they need it in the fall."
Declaration forms are available at dealers' offices now and should be obtained without delay.

House Approves Bill On Interior Monies
WASHINGTON, April 27.—(AP)—The House passed by unanimous voice vote and sent to the Senate today a $101,242,628 appropriation bill for the Interior Department for the fiscal year starting next July 1.
Only $1,360,000 was chopped by the House during several days of debate from the total funds recommended by its appropriation committee. The reduction was in the allotment for engineering and investigations of proposed federal reclamation projects.
The total in the bill was approximately $40,000,000 below budget estimates and $3,100,000 more than the department received for the current fiscal year.

12 CHICKENS CUT SENTENCE
MOUND CITY, Ill., April 27.—(AP)—Noah Wiggins received something new in the way of reduced jail sentences. Wiggins was sentenced to one year for chicken-stealing, but the court recommended that for every fowl returned, one week should be cut from the original term. The defendant managed to rake up a dozen chickens, knocking 12 weeks from his sentence, but he's still in jail for a long time.

TYPOGRAPHY AWARD
SALISBURY, April 27.—(AP)—The Salisbury Evening Post was notified today that it had placed fourth in the nation among daily newspapers with circulation from 10,000 and 50,000 in the 15th annual exhibition of newspaper typography conducted by N. W. Ayer and Son Galleries of New York.

House Sends Draft Bill To Truman For Approval

WASHINGTON, April 27.—(AP)—After approving unanimously a restriction against use of 18-year-old inductees in combat, the house sent to President Truman today legislation extending the draft law.
Without the extension, the act under which the United States has conscripted the biggest Army and Navy in its history would have expired on May 15.
The continuation is until May 15, 1946, or until the end of the global war, whichever comes first.
The House action was by voice vote on the question of concurring in a Senate amendment to an earlier House bill extending the draft law without change.
The Senate's amendment prohibited the use in combat of inducted men under 19 until they had had at least six months of training. It grew out of complaints of members of Congress that youths had been killed in action less than six months from the time of their induction.
While the Army had opposed the curb when the House first acted on the bill last month, it was understood to have withdrawn its objection in the light of recent developments on the war fronts.
The restriction does not prevent the Navy or the Coast Guard from assigning 18-year-old inductees to training on combat ships. Presumably—although the bill does not say so—such trainees would be kept out of actual combat if possible.
Neither does it require the recall from combat of men now in fighting units without six months of training.
Representative Sparkman (D-Ala.), who handled the bill for the House Military Committee, obtained approval for an expression of Congressional intention that the legislation should not interfere with the Army or Marine Corps program of training new inductees outside this country. Such men, however, would not be called upon to face the enemy until they had been trained at least six months.
Sparkman explained also that the legislation would not preclude the use in combat of volunteers under 19 without six months of training.

TODAY and TOMORROW
By WALTER LIPPMANN

SAN FRANCISCO. — This conference is meeting at the invitation of the great military powers who are liberating mankind. Their combined force is the greatest ever mobilized on earth. Yet the fact that they have convoked this conference is itself the proof that they know they could not, even if they wish to do so, remain united as a dictatorship over the peoples of the world.
They would not be here if they did not realize that they cannot organize peace as, of necessity, they have conducted the war. They can only lead. For the making of peace, which will take a long time, they must have the consent and active collaboration of many nations. And so they have come here to San Francisco to ask the other nations for their consent and for their collaboration. They need this consent during the enormously troubled period which lies ahead before the world is pacified, and a settled peace is possible again. And the other nations need their leadership. For if the great powers become divided, there will certainly come a period of unprecedented violence and misery which might well be even more devastating than this horrible war.
So the victorious powers which possess irresistible military might are here asking the political consent of the nations of the world. The spectacle is, if one pauses to realize its novelty and its significance, a very great event in the moral evolution of mankind.
Their leadership is necessary and so they will get the consent. For the end of the organized fighting will not usher in a condition which could by any stretch of language be described as peace. We are entering in Europe, and in the not to distant future in eastern Asia too, a period of pacification which must be traversed successfully before a settled peace can be reached.
In this period, which will last for the better part of a generation, unity of leadership among the great powers and the consent of the other nations are indispensable. The first purpose of the San Francisco conference is to draft a charter which gives consent and recognition to the leadership of the great powers during the period of pacification. This is the security council. Its second purpose is to create an organ by which the nations can create the institutions and establish the laws of a universal society. This is the assembly. To the security council is entrusted the general maintenance of order during the period of pacification. To the assembly is entrusted the task of creating the society which can come into being as the world is pacified.

It is in this period of pacification, when the enemy states are being policed, the armies demobilized, the wreckage of war cleared up and repaired, and civilian life restored, that the issue will be decided whether this is the beginning of a long peace or of preparation for another war. The greatest retail, were made part of the Government and given responsibility for the conduct of their business in the interests of the war.

The average American was made to feel that, through his voluntary effort, he was helping to conserve food in the interests of the war. The public was persuaded to accept wheatless and meatless days as a small part of the effort to win the war.
Perhaps it is not too late to appeal once again to the ordinary American's good will; to his sense of responsibility for a sound peace based on a stable Europe. At any rate, it would be worth trying, since the food surpluses essential for liberated Europe are not in sight.
Out in North Dakota, under the leadership of the farmers union, consumers have turned back to OPA 450,000 red points. We, in the rest of the country, might follow that example.
