

Parent-Teachers Plan 10-Point Study Programs

GREENSBORO, June 25.—(AP)—Erected on the theme, "together we build," platform of the North Carolina Congress of Parents and Teachers "for the achievement of a good life for all children everywhere" through the securing of permanent peace out of victory, better homes, better schools and better communities was presented at the opening session tonight of the 17th annual State Parent-Teachers Institute at Woman's College.

Mrs. E. N. Howell, president of Swannanoa, and Miss Laurie Lowrance, findings chairman, of Winston-Salem, presented the program for enlarged efforts of Parent-Teacher workers. Included in the discussion was recommendation for a 10-point program of study and action in providing better educational opportunities for all youth of the state.

In the educational platform are the following plans: Relief of overcrowded classrooms; funds for enforcement of compulsory school attendance; health, including safety, physical education, nutrition and expanding and improving lunchrooms; expanded facilities for guidance, vocational and special education, including needs of returned veterans; extended school service, including nurseries and kindergartens; active interest in prestige of the teaching profession to bring about higher salaries, better living conditions for teachers, improvement in the quality of teaching through in-service training and competent supervision, tenure and improvement of the retirement plan; recruitment of young people for entering the teaching profession; continued effort to secure federal aid to education; building program to include construction of new buildings and repair of present buildings; increased appropriation for school libraries.

The institute will continue through noon Thursday with morning and afternoon workshop sessions in the techniques of Parent-Teacher work conducted by Mrs. Albert Gardner, regional vice president of the National Congress, of Trenton, N. J., and officers and committee chairmen of the State Congress, and night programs on international relations and educational advancement.

Take It Easy!

By BETTY CLARKE (AP Newsfeatures Beauty Editor)

If you haven't yet been burned sunning yourself on the beach, lawn or backyard, you might like to think about the possibility of acquiring a tan by the slow but sure method.

It seems a little silly to sun oneself to the point of exhaustion with dire consequences of prolonged exposure to the sun's rays.

Then, too, after you've had a severe burn it is impossible to sit in the sun until your wounds are healed. When you blister and peel, besides the discomfort given by an unattractive appearance, it is a painful experience to work with sore arms, thighs or legs.

Nothing can be gained by an overstay in the sun unless it is misery whereas a little common sense and planning can insure a prettier body and more healthful summer.

There are some who can tan naturally without any help from lotions. But it is wise to apply a tannic type lotion even if you have the easy tanning brunette skin, just in case you should overstay your sun time.

The time you should allot yourself to bask in the sun depends on how quickly you burn. Here is a good schedule you might paste on your lotion bottle and refer to while you are sunning yourself. If you find you cannot take as much as is allowed, cut your time down a bit. Or you may find that you can add a few extra minutes without any undue harm to your body.

1st day—Noon—10 minutes
2nd day—1:00—12 minutes
3rd day—1:30—15 minutes
4th day—2:00—25 minutes
5th day—1:30—30 minutes
6th day—1:00—45 minutes
7th day—Noon—60 minutes

Once you have established this system you can schedule yourself from one hour upwards of sunshine depending on your own ability to withstand heat. The best sunbathing hours usually are between 11 to 3 in the afternoon.

Time To Quiz Servicemen On Yule Gifts

By ARLENE WOLF AP Newsfeatures Writer

It's not too early to start thinking about Christmas, if there are servicemen on your gift list. Army and Navy officials urge you to write your serviceman now, write and ask what he wants, so that he may have a useful as well as a merry Christmas.

The shifting of large numbers of men from Europe to the Pacific will change the gift possibilities somewhat, the military advises, and gifts that were desirable in the European theater may not be feasible for the hot Pacific. A letter mailed now will reach the soldier in time for him to send back his preferred gift list, and in time to get the parcel off during the prescribed mailing period—September 15 to October 15.

Last year, about 85,000 Christmas packages were mailed overseas. Many could not be delivered or arrived months late because of unwise gift selection, insecure wrapping, incomplete addressing or late mailing. This year, packages bound for the Pacific theater will have to be almost twice the distance they traveled to Europe—from a mid-western town to Cherbourg, for example is about 5,000 miles, but from the same place to Okinawa is more than 9,000 miles.

To protect gift packages from extreme heat, cold, sand and dampness, the War and Navy departments recommend packing boxes of heavy metal, wood, solid fibreboard or double-faced corrugated fibreboard. The War Production Board has approved the manufacture of boxes approximately 10 by 6 by 4 inches, permitting compact mailing within the five-pound weight limit, but last year's regulations about prohibited items still apply.

To make doubly sure that all gifts reach the boys intact, the sender is asked to list the parcel's contents on a separate sheet of paper bearing the serviceman's name and complete address. In this way, if the outside wrappings are damaged, the armed service postal authorities can still deliver it in time for Christmas.

Morning Report

About 100 patients in the Regional Hospital are now participating each week in a series of news analysis discussions brought to them in their wards by Wac Pvt. Elma G. Davis, former college history teacher, who believes that soldiers' understanding of international relations will speed victory and make possible an enduring peace.

Speaking to groups of up to 20 patients in each ward visited, Pvt. Davis approaches her discussions with a deep personal interest in war and postwar problems.

To create an understanding of world affairs, Pvt. Davis says, an instructor must do more than present a re-hash of the day's front page. Her own discussions reach into the historical, economic and geographical background of nations about which she is talking.

Before coming to Camp Davis, Pvt. Davis directed the entire orientation program for the AAF Convalescent Hospital, Nashville, Tenn., where her daily lecture was attended voluntarily by a group of about 750 men, representing an average of 95 per cent of all who were able to be present. The ambitious nature of her program there, characteristic of all her orientation work, can be seen from the title of the series of lectures she gave at Nashville: "Winning the Peace by Social, Economic and Geographic Adjustments." She hopes to present a similar series to patients at Camp Davis.

Holder of an M.A. degree from the University of Arkansas, Pvt. Davis taught for eight years at Henderson State Teachers college, Arakadelphia, Ark., before joining the WAC in May, 1944.

Okinawa GIs Set Behavior Pattern For Wives At Home

By RUTH MILLETT

A recent story from Okinawa reported that 85-point Yanks were zealously protected by their buddies—so that nothing would happen to them before the day they were scheduled to go home.

If war wives back home could take that protective, interested attitude toward the wives who are soon to get their men back, instead of being jealous of their good fortune, every homecoming would be a sign for rejoicing among all war wives.

And that is just what is happening in a good many cases. A war wife whose husband is coming home on points is often swamped with offers of help and best wishes by less lucky war wives whose men are still sweating it out.

"I'll keep the kids for you if you want to meet your husband when he lands," one war wife will say.

And another will look after the house and garden. And others are interested in the clothes she buys—wanting her to have only the most becoming things.

The wives aren't even hesitant about giving advice or saying, "Now if it were Bill who were coming home, I'd do so and so."

Taking another war wife's good luck in that manner is, of course, the happiest reaction war wives could have. For there is nothing in that attitude that tears down their own morale.

The thing that ticks them is making "bitter" comparisons and thinking, "She's getting her husband back—but nothing is changed for me."

If the men can want their friends to get home so badly they treat them "like expectant mothers"—as the news story pointed out—so that nothing will happen to them before they can be on their way, then surely war wives at home can be that generous in their attitude toward the lucky women who are soon to have their men back with them.
