SURVIVORS SAVED BY DARING STUNT

(Continued from Page One) The brave WAC said Col. Ray T. Elsmore, of Menlo Park Calif., cargo chief of the Far Eastern Air Force, had offered to fly her over the valley tomorrow in his own plane...

The valley, inhabited by natives who live in walled communities and war on each other, is isolated from North New Guinea by 150 miles of mountains, most of them unexplored. It is shut off from New Guinea by mountains and some 200 miles of crocodile-infested swamps.

As Major Samuels followed with the pickup plane, he radioed the weather was closing in and "I don't think I can pick up today." Col. Elsmore, flying over for observation in a B-29, assured him: "This is the best weather I've seen in the valley in many a day. You can do it. Go right down there and pick up the glider. You'll never get much better weather here."

JOHNSON FILES DISSIDENT OPINION

(Continued from Page One) as other residents of the Company's territory, the company would have had a surplus of about $150,000 which could have been used to reduce rates for other residential users. "I am unwilling," he said, "to allow residential customers, whether they live in a government apartment, a rented house or one of their own, to buy or use electric energy bought at a rate cheaper than is paid by all of the residential customers served by the company. A citizen living in a government-owned house should have no advantage over the citizen living in his own house."

Wilmington Area Has 1360 PW's Now At Work

Approximately 9,400 German prisoners of war are held in base and side camps in North Carolina and are assigned to work in order to relieve the manpower shortage in agriculture, timber and industry under private contract or at Army installations for maintenance and repair. It has been announced by Major General Edward H. Brooks, Commanding General, Fourth Service Command. Five hundred and forty nine are stationed in Wilmington and are engaged in agriculture, pulpwood and the fertilizer industry. Camp Davis has 811 for post maintenance while the largest number stationed at any one unit is 3,136 at the Camp Butler base camp.

Using prisoners on private contract only when civilian labor is unavailable and on Army installations to release American soldiers for other duties, or for jobs for which civilian workers cannot be found, the working prisoners are paid 80 cents a day in canteen coupons—with a sharply curtailed list of items obtainable. General Brooks explained. The prisoners are shifted under private contract as need for labor demands and in North Carolina they are working on farms at present and will later work in harvesting various crops. They are also working in pulpwood and timber.

At headquarters here the three survivors told of the crash May 13. Lt. McCollom said he crawled from the burning fuselage. Sgt. Decker and Capt. Hastings said they were thrown out, unconscious. McCollom then crawled back to the plane and gave morphine injections to two other passengers who were still alive but mortally injured. They lived about 24 hours. All the others were killed in the crash.

The three survivors agreed that some hard candies and a life raft saved them. They ate candy until they were "sick of it." McCollom said, while the yellow raft, punctured, served as a tent, and attracted the attention of a plane that spotted them four days later. It took the trio a day and a half to get four miles down the mountainside to the spot where they were discovered.

"We weren't afraid of the natives after our first encounter with them," said McCollom. "They carry spears and bows and arrows. But from the way they looked at us from behind trees we knew they were more afraid of us than we were of them."

VANDENBURG ASKS RATIFICATION

In one of the most eloquent, moving speeches the Senate has heard in years, the elder statesman said the United Nations stand on the threshold of a great adventure — an adventure into collective security for peace. He cautioned his colleagues against "precipitous haste" in considering the Charter. But he promptly added that he would "deeply regret any needless or undue delay."

Then, in a climactic appeal for early ratification of the historic document, he said: "America has everything to gain and nothing to lose by giving its support; everything to lose and nothing to gain by declining this continued fraternity with the United Nations in behalf of the dearest dream of humankind, peace. I commend it to Congress and the country."

When he finished, the Senate and packed galleries gave him a standing ovation. Senators and members of the House of Representatives, who had come over to hear his speech, crowded around to shake his hand in congratulations. Sen. Robert A. Taft, R., O., informally proposed a reservation to the Charter defining the functions and powers of the U. S. Delegate to the United Nations Council. But Vandenberg said no such reservation is necessary.
