Women And Peace

Church Suppers Will Help, Says Clubwoman

By ADELAIDE KERR
AP Newfeatures Writer

Women had better bestir themselves if they want the peace foundations laid at San Francisco to stick," says one of their leaders, who attended the recent world security conference.

She is Margaret Hickey, President of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs and Chairman of the Women's Advisory Committee of the War Manpower Commission.

"This is no time to sit back and relax," Miss Hickey said on a recent New York visit. "We have the blueprint for a peace machinery, but not the reality—and after the machine does become a reality, we shall have to make it hold together. For all this women have a tremendous responsibility."

"History proves that what the people demand they get. Peace will hold according to the force of public opinion. Women can do a great deal here through the education of their children, through introducing discussion at their dinner parties and study in the home and through lively community activities. Just consider what can be done at a series of good church suppers followed by round-table discussion and you will see the power which women can wield for peace if they put their minds to it."

Miss Hickey, who was discussing women and peace as she breakfasted in her hotel suite, paused a moment to pour a second cup of coffee and then went on.

"People have a very fuzzy idea about peace. They think of it as a perfect state and it isn't going to be. In war it is just plain foolishness not to get along with your allies. But in peace we may not be so careful and there is danger in their attitude."

"Compromise are made through effort to understand the other fellow's country—his problems, rights and points of view. The other evening I talked to a young soldier just back from Italy. He said, 'It's a terrible country! For one thing nobody speaks English.' I asked him if he had tried to learn Italian and his answer was 'No, of course not.'"

MARGARET HICKEY . . .

"There are millions like him all over the world. To them the rest of the world is 'foreign' and the 'foreigners' are always wrong. That point of view has to be changed completely if peace is to hold. And it is here that women can do important work at home and in the community."

Miss Hickey spoke earnestly. She is one of America's outstanding career women. She began her business career during World War I and then when she reached an office manager's job in 1923, she dropped it to study law. She was admitted to the Missouri bar in 1928, practiced for some time in St. Louis, Mo., and then resigned to found a St. Louis school for business women. In private life she is the wife of Joseph Strubinger, a St. Louis lawyer.

She always has been active in vocational guidance and, from time to time has brought together employers, employees and students in job clinics. She also works on the Foreign Trade, Public Affairs and Legislation Committee of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce and has made a number of lectures in high schools and colleges.

"TRAITOR PATROLS"

HERFORD, Germany, July 21.(AP)—German youths have begun going on "traitor patrols" in various towns in the British occupation zone, taking the names of all German girls they see with Allied troops.

An Allied officer said: "I have seen gangs of these young Germans, armed with notebooks and pencils, going along river banks spying on German girls. I saw one German girl being kicked and slapped after she had left her British soldier friend."

Auto Hits Three Others In Wild Ride On Castle

An accident involving three cars, shortly after midnight Friday, occurred when the car driven by F. J. Parker, 5 Court F., Lake Forest, was hit by a unidentified Ford coupe which ran his car off the side of the street, according to Parker. Parker's car then hit a car owned by J. D. Orrell, parked in front of 1610 Castle street, damaging the left rear fender. He then continued some 35 yards down the street, hit a stump and ran into the car of W. N. Smith parked at 1613 Castle street. Parker was taken to James Walker Memorial Hospital and treated for lacerations of the head and knees and later arrested for reckless driving.

WILMINGTON MARINE FINDS OWN BRITCHES ON DRESSED-UP JAP

What the best-dressed Japs were wearing into battle on Okinawa proved to be of more than passing interest to S. Sgt. Pemberton W. Hobbs, grandson of Mrs. W. H. Hobbs, 715 Dock street.

A radar operator with the Marine Corps, Sgt. Hobbs writes that in surveying a recently captured batch of Jap prisoners on Okinawa, he spied one be-goggled, four-foot Jap shuffling along in a pair of Marine Corps trousers obviously not tailored to his size.

Curious, Sgt. Hobbs, a 200-lb. six-footer, stripped the pants of the Jap, and inside he read the label "Pemberton W. Hobbs." The pants had disappeared from his tent the night before.

Sgt. Hobbs is the son of Colonel and Mrs. Graham K. Hobbs of Raleigh, and has a younger brother, Alfred, who is also stationed somewhere in the Pacific with the Marine Corps.
