Coddling the Returned Serviceman

By RUTH MILLETT

Every time you pick up a woman's magazine these days it seems you find an article about the returning serviceman — which dish out advice to the little woman back home.

The gist of them all is that the girl who has waited out the war patiently must practice even more patience and understanding when her man comes home.

An article in the current issue of a national woman's magazine is fairly typical. Written by a returned serviceman it warns wives that their returned serviceman who found it almost intolerable to live apart from his wife may find it difficult to readjust himself to living with her again. "Patience and understanding" are suggested as the antidote.

of goddess-like ideal during his absence which the little woman back home may find it extremely difficult to live up to.

Well, if the writer is putting down facts—what does that make the returning serviceman? A guy who comes home so filled with his part in the war he doesn't even see what his wife has had to put up with during the long, lonely years. A man—who, though he expected his wife to be faithful—might be comparing her to "those other women he has known."

Should "Be His Age"

A man who, finding his adjustment to civilian life hard, will take it out on you and will be short-tempered and say things he doesn't mean.

A man who will be so immature as to expect you to measure up to a goddess image which he has built up in his own mind.

Probably the article is exaggerated—and if so, it has no business being printed in a woman's magazine where it can scare a bunch of women who have already been scared enough during the war years.

If it isn't exaggerated, then it doesn't look as though you ought to go all out for patience and understanding. It looks as though you ought to tell that returning serviceman to be his age and quit being a returned hero. And the sooner the better—for you both.

Start Career As Secretary For Sure Success, Advises Woman Radio Producer

By VERNON EDWARDS NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—Take short-hand girls, if you are setting out on a glamorous career in the theater, radio, or advertising fields.

That's the advice of Mildred Fenton, radio's only producer-packager. A packager, she explains, is one who originates an idea for a radio program, assigns writers to work it out, selects the cast and puts the show into production. It's then ready to be sold, all wrapped up in a package, to an advertiser or radio station.

Becoming an expert stenographer and working your way up slowly may sound like the long road to fame, but it's the surest one, Miss Fenton insists.

For while you're working for an executive in your chosen field, you'll be getting a picture of the business as a whole. Then, when you've learned what makes the wheels go round, you can choose the branch of the business to which you can best adapt your talents, and go on from there — which is just what Miss Fenton did.

After finishing high school in East Orange, N. J., she took a business course and worked as secretary in a music company, and for theatrical and radio executives. For 10 years she worked for "soap opera" producers in America and England as secretary, script editor, casting director and finally as general supervisor of radio programs.

Changing jobs, Miss Fenton thinks, is good so long as each broadens your experience. Meanwhile, in her spare time, she capitalized on her early voice training and gained knowledge of audience appeal by singing in a small night club.

When she knew all angles of radio producing, Miss Fenton organized her own company. Now, 10 months later, she has an all-female staff of 13 and occupies two floors of a building.

Four of her programs — "Musical Bouquet," "Sweetheart Time," "Detect and Collect" and "Love Notes" — are heard on national networks. And she has surpassed her goal of netting $50,000 a year. Having come up the long, hard way, Miss Fenton is anxious to help her own girls up the ladder of success. Each is made to feel she is an important part of the organization, not merely a typist, receptionist or telephone operator. And each is trained to do the others work and accept responsibility. That is why Mildred Fenton's organization is one of the smoothest running, successful outfits in radio.

Wilmington Man Fined On Nuisance Charges

Harold Abrahams, of Wilmington, was found guilty in Recorder's court yesterday afternoon of creating a public nuisance and fined $100 and costs with sentence suspended after charges of violating a Wrightsville Beach ordinance against operation of motorboats without mufflers were withdrawn, J. W. Dowdy, the other defendant in the test case, was found not guilty.

The resort ordinance prohibits the operation of motor craft in the Banks Channel without mufflers and has been a point of contention for some time.

Abrahams has 10 days in which to file notice of appeal to a higher court but it was not known last night whether such action would be taken.
